PREP AND HIGH SCHOOL GIVEN RECOGNITION

Placed On Accredited List Of Secondary Schools Commission For 1932.

ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE TODAY

Gettysburg academy and the Gettysburg high school have been accredited for 1932 by the commission on secondary schools of the association of colleges and universities of the middle states and Maryland, according to announcement today by Dr. E. Duncan Grizzell, professor of secondary education at the University of Pennsylvania and chairman of the commission.

The commission on secondary schools serves as a fact-finding and rating agency in preparing a list of accredited schools within its territory and also functions as a clearing-house for information of a professional character concerning these schools.

Any public or private secondary school in New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the District of Columbia and the Panama Canal Zone may apply for inclusion on the commission's accredited list, but failure to be included on the list does not necessarily imply inefficiency on the part of a school, according to Dr. Grizzell.

No Responsibility

"When the commission acts upon applications from schools seeking to be placed on the accredited list the commission does not assume at present any responsibility beyond that of judging the ability of an efficient secondary school to prepare its students for college work," Dr. Grizzell stated. "Approval by the commission merely means approval or accrediting to college."

"Thus, secondary schools which do not appear on the commission's accredited list may be doing work equally as efficient as those listed, but may be excluded solely because they do not prepare well, or at all, for college entrance. In some instances, the failure of schools to apply for places on the accredited list is responsible for their omission."

Union Services Sunday Evening

On Sunday evening at 7 o'clock the Protestant church of Gettysburg, carrying out plans made at the last meeting of the Gettysburg Ministerial association, will hold a union service at the St. James Lutheran church. The Protestant churches of Adams county are also asked to cooperate. The Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of the host church, will have general supervision of the service. The speaker of the evening will be Ben Spence, newspaper correspondent of the Toronto Globe, Toronto, Canada. At present Mr. Spence is representing his paper at Washington. Mr. Spence, who is recognized as an authority on the liquor situation in Canada, will speak on the subject "The Canadian Systems of Liquor Control."

Will Make Seven Apartments Out Of Breidenbaugh Home

Work has been started on the remodeling of the Breidenbaugh home, Carlisle street, into seven apartments. The property, for many years the home of the late Dr. and Mrs. Edward S. Breidenbaugh, contains 20 rooms and two baths and can readily be turned into apartments. The apartments are expected to be ready for occupancy by the middle of April.

Strack Memorial chapel, York, followed by concluding services at 2 o'clock in the Zion A. M. E. church, here. The Rev. Thomas E. Muntouth, pastor of Faith Presbyterian church, York, assisted by the Rev. R. Rector, pastor of the Zion A. M. E. church, officiated. The pallbearers were Samuel Stanton, Roy Moser, Edward Miller and Clayton Moxley. Interment was made in the Goodwill cemetery here.

York Springs Woman Writes History of Founding of YWCA

An interesting story, entitled "Trail Blazers," on the founding and growth of the Gettysburg and Adams county Y. W. C. A., written by Miss Edna Albert, of York Springs, appears in the January number of "The Woman's Press," a national magazine devoted to the work of the Y. W. C. A.

The article follows: "Once upon a time there was a woman in Gettysburg who loved girls. She lived in an old brick house set on one corner of The Square, and there she gathered together a group of the young girls of the town and formed a club that stood for finer and more spacious thinking than they might have ventured upon without her leadership. When she died, she bequeathed her home and most of the things in it, including an interesting old library, to the girls of Gettysburg, to be the headquarters of a long dreamed of Young Women's Christian Association."

Sues Highland Township For Road Services

Charles J. Cluck, Highland township, filed suit Thursday against the Township of Highland in the office of S. L. Allison, prothonotary, to recover $36.45 which he claims for the use of his team in township road construction work last year.

Cluck alleges in his statement of claim that L. E. Carbaugh, one of the supervisors of Highland township, employed him to furnish his team for road construction on five different occasions in 1931, and that despite repeated requests for payment the supervisors have refused to pay him for his services.

W. Clarence Sheely, Gettysburg attorney-at-law represents Cluck.

TO NAME C. OF C. GROUPS MONDAY

Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson Will Announce Committee Appointments Monday Night.

Chamber of Commerce committee appointments for 1932 will be announced at the January meeting of the local organization in the Hotel Gettysburg annex, Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of the local chamber announced that he has completed the selection of his committees for the coming year and will announce the personnel at Monday's meeting.

Preparations for the drive for members and contributions to the chamber will also be discussed at Monday's session and a large turnout of members is expected. Officers of the local organization are hopeful of another generous response of townspeople to this body in an effort to promote the commercial and industrial advancement of Gettysburg.

Fred Biehl, the newly elected secretary who took over his new duties January 1, is expected to make several important announcements.

Balance In Treasury

A large number of the 1931 members have signed their intentions of retaining their membership for 1932 and others who did not join the Chamber of Commerce last year announced that they would enroll this year.

Treasurer James B. Aumen will report a balance in the treasury from 1931 thus giving the chamber the added impetus of financial resources to start another year.

Officers of the chamber announced today that they plan to carry on an active campaign to secure more conventions for Gettysburg during the coming years and that an intensive publicity campaign will be conducted in an effort to increase the tourist patronage to the Gettysburg battlefields.

The officers also expressed the belief that local merchants will take a more active interest in chamber affairs this year than they have in the past.

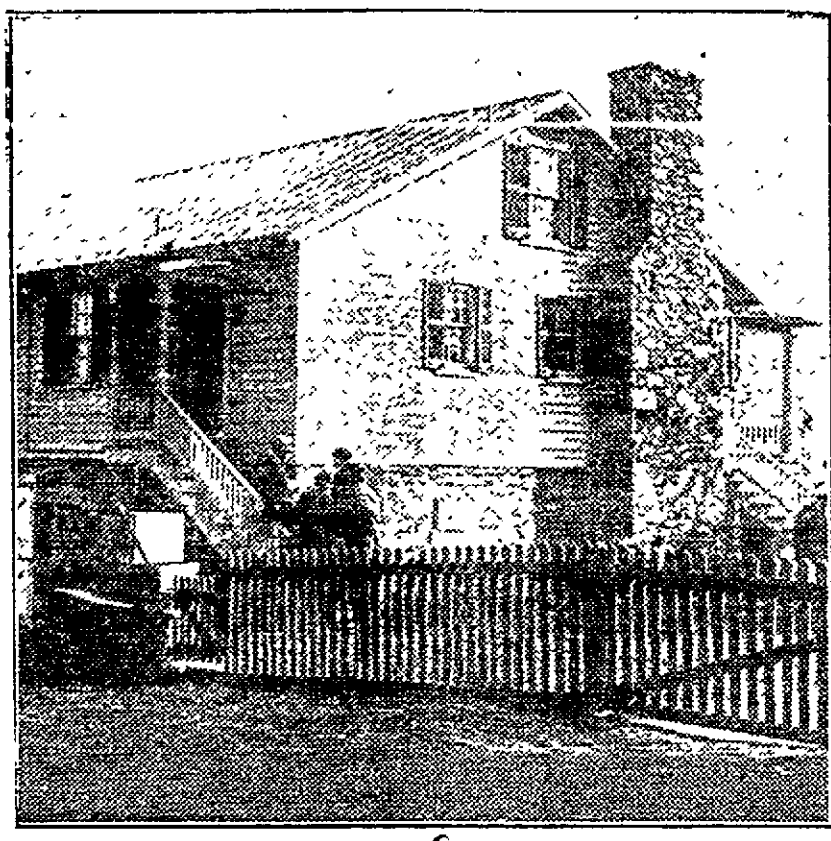

Veterans Elect Officers Monday

Election of officers will feature a meeting of the Adams county veterans' association to be held in the American Legion rooms, Baltimore street, next Monday evening, John Stambaugh, president, announced today. All ex-service men in the county, regardless of whether they belong to the organization or not, have been requested to attend the meeting.

HOSPITAL REPORT

Frank Trout, Gettysburg R. D., was removed to his home from the Warner hospital in the Gettysburg ambulance today.

Grim Mounties Again Mush North to Besiege Mad Trapper

Aklavik, N. W. T., Jan. 15 (AP).—Mushing through the twilight of the Arctic's six-month winter night a determined squad of red-coated mounties was believed on the trail for a third attempt to dislodge a hermit trapper from his isolated Rattler cabin.

Twice the trapper, who is well supplied with ammunition and rifles and pistols, has withstood the attack of police.

The hermit, Albert Johnson, is accused of shooting and wounding Constable A. M. King, of the Royal Canadian mounted police, when King and Constable R. G. McDowell trekked to his cabin to question him concerning complaints of Indians that their trap lines were being robbed.

Through a raging blizzard, McDowell mushed a dog team the eighty miles to Aklavik with King on the sled, seriously but not fatally wounded. With the arrival of the two officers, a posse was formed and retraced the long trail to the lonely hut. The posse was met by rifle and pistol fire when it attempted to approach the stronghold, which Johnson, believed demented, had built.

Bombs and rifle fire failed to dislodge the trapper, who found safety in a tunnel beneath his cabin when bomb explosions broke in the door and tore large holes in the roof. He returned to his loopholes, a few inches above the ground, in time to stare off another advance by the eight troopers and hurl verbal taunts at them, punctuated by the staccato bark of pistols, used in true old west two-gun style.

With supplies growing scanty, a guard was left near the cabin to prevent Johnson's escape, and the constables returned here to prepare for another invasion of the hermit's territory.

County Couple Married Tuesday

Paul Sneringer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sneringer, Brush Run, and Miss Mary Myers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Casper Myers, Bonneauville, were united in marriage in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Bonneauville, Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock. Raymond Sneringer, brother of the bridegroom, was best man, and Miss Alice Myers, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The bride wore a gown of white satin and a veil. The maid of honor was attired in green. A wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents. The newlyweds will go to housekeeping in the spring on the Casper Myers farm, near Brush Run.

Students Present Comedy Tonight

The Mask and Wig club of Gettysburg high school will present the comedy "The Charming Pretender" in the high school auditorium this evening at 8 o'clock. The play, which has been in rehearsal for several weeks, is directed by Miss Ruth McIlhenny, of the high school faculty.

Fined For Driving Car Without Tags

On his way to Philadelphia where he had been engaged to play in an orchestra, Arthur Concello, of Bloomington, Illinois, was arrested near New Oxford, Thursday afternoon, for driving a car without license plates.

Concello told a local state highway motor patrolman, who arrested him, that he had purchased the car in Illinois before leaving for Philadelphia, and had made application for license tags.

Despite his explanation, Concello was taken before Justice of the Peace W. D. Myers, New Oxford, where he paid a fine of $10 and costs of $2.25.

WARM SPELL HURTS FRUIT

Adams County Orchardists Fear Damage Later; Many Signs Of Spring.

Record-breaking high temperatures in Gettysburg and Adams county during the past two days may be pleasant to the average person who enjoys plenty of sunshine but owners of peach and cherry orchards are not so keen about the weather.

Orchardists, particularly those owning peach, cherry and plum trees, fear that the abnormally high temperatures, if they continue, will cause the sap to rise in the trees and start buds and foliage shooting forth. Such a condition, followed by freezing weather, would wreak havoc to the early fruit, fruit men say.

Apple growers say the present warm weather would not have any damaging effect on the early and commercial apple crops unless the temperatures should remain "up in the air" for a protracted period.

The torrid temperatures will not affect the winter wheat crop in Adams county. That grain is "looking better" now than any time in recent years, one prominent agriculturist said today. Rain and warm temperatures cannot hurt wheat, he added. Such a combination is even better than a blanket of snow over the fields, the man said.

Flowers In Bloom

Garden and wild flowers and bird life have felt the urge of the warm temperatures of the past few days. Mrs. Howard Hartzell, Lincoln Way east, reports violets and pansies in bloom, and Mrs. H. H. Thomas, York street, has calendulas and yellow bellies in blossom. Peonies are shooting green and snapdragons are showing buds.

From Biglerville come a report that song sparrows which usually do not make their appearance until the middle of February, are awing, singing merrily, and flocks of wild geese migrating northward have been seen. Wild geese usually do not go north until March.

Mrs. Fred E. Griest, Quaker Valley, has stock flowers blooming and a butterfly bush is showing yellow. Miss Alice Black, Biglerville, reports a petunia bush in bloom.

Bees and wasps have been reported in Biglerville, and crows flying high are an indication of a continuation of warm weather.

The maximum temperature, Thursday, in Gettysburg was 74 degrees, according to Dr. Henry Stewart, local weather recorder. Thursday was the warmest January 14 in the history of the local weather bureau, records of which go back to 1897.

The mean, or average temperature for January 14, is 57.5 degrees (Continued on Page Two)

Milton Wye, Colored, Found Dying in Gas-Filled Room

Milton Wye, colored, proprietor of the Red Lion cleaning and pressing establishment, North Washington street, was taken to the Warner hospital in a dying condition late this afternoon after he was found unconscious in a gas-filled room at his cleaning place.

F. Mark Bream, Carlisle street, a local mail carrier, first smelled gas issuing from the Red Lion cleaning place when he passed there on his first delivery this morning.

The odor persisted when he passed the place again this afternoon. Stopping at the office of Dr. C. G. Crist, Chambersburg street, Bream reported the circumstances to the physician.

Found Unconscious

Doctor Crist called Officer John H. Keller and together they went to the place. The front door of the Red Lion shop was open about two inches. The stench of gas was strong in the workroom in the front and on a bed in a room behind the workshop, the men found Wye unconscious.

NEW STAMPS ON SALE HERE

Washington Bi-Centennial Issues Present Variety Of Colors And Pictures.

New postage stamps issued to commemorate the bi-centennial of the birth of George Washington are on sale at the Gettysburg postoffice it is announced today. In addition, the postoffice has the George Washington 2-cent, envelopes on sale.

The stamps, which were placed on sale in the National Capital on January 1, and in other cities since that time, are in a series of twelve, from one-half cent to the ten-cent denomination. These stamps show Washington as he was painted at different times in his life by different artists.

Half-Cent Stamp

The one-half cent stamp is dark brown in color, bearing the likeness of Washington painted by Charles Wilson Peale, the original of which is now in the Metropolitan museum of art. The one-cent stamp, printed in green, is a reproduction of the profile bust by Houdon made in 1785 and now among the treasures at Mount Vernon. The one and one-half cent stamp is light brown featuring another Peale portrait of Washington known as the Virginia Colonel, now in possession of Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Virginia.

The stamp which went on sale here today, is the two-cent issue bearing the likeness of George Washington, the Gilbert Stuart Athenaeum portrait done at Germantown in 1796. Already this portrait has become generally known among Americans because of its use on the one-dollar bill.

Purple Stamp

The color of the three-cent stamp is purple and it bears a reproduction of the Peale portrait painted at Valley Forge in 1777 showing Washington in the uniform of a general with a cocked hat. Another Peale (Continued on Page Two)

SEVEN CASES OF DIPHTHERIA IN ADAMS COUNTY

Young Mother And 6-year-old Daughter Among Those Quarantined.

LOCAL BOY HAS SCARLET FEVER

Seven persons in six families in Adams county are suffering from diphtheria, according to Health Officer John Deatrick, Biglerville, who quarantined the places in the past week. One home was quarantined today, three on Thursday and the other two were placarded earlier in the week.

Mrs. Melvin Young, 28, of Reading township, and her six-year-old daughter, Betty, are both ill with the malady. Mrs. Mary Huff, 58, Berwick township; Burnell Stambaugh, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Stambaugh, Berwick township; a pupil at Beaver Creek school; George Zinn, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Zinn, Berwick township; a pupil at Green Spring school; Eleanor Laughman, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Laughman, Berwick township; and Lester Emmert, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Emmert, Coneago township. He attended Midway school.

Scarlet Fever Here

"Billy" Keefe, 8-year-old son of Prof. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Keefe, Baltimore street, and a pupil in the third grade at the High street building, has contracted scarlet fever. The house has been quarantined.

"Billy's" illness was diagnosed as scarlet fever by Dr. C. G. Crist, Gettysburg, and Dr. J. Moore Campbell, of the state department of health, Harrisburg, Thursday afternoon. The case is described as mild.

Professor Keefe, who is supervising principal of the local public schools, was placed in observation quarantine at the home of George P. Black, Baltimore street, for ten days. At the end of that time, he will be allowed to return to his duties.

Child Succumbs

Private funeral services were held Thursday afternoon for Betty Louise Brown, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, Hanover, who died Wednesday afternoon of diphtheria. She is survived by her father and mother, the latter now ill from diphtheria. The child was buried at Mummert's meeting house, near East Berlin.

Pinchot Gives New Yorker a $6,000 Year Job

Harrisburg, Jan. 15 (AP).—Appointment of 70 state employees and dismissal of nine was announced today by the governor's office. Two employees were reinstated.

R. B. Flemming Pittsburg, was appointed publicity director of the Greater Pennsylvania Council at a salary of $7,500. P. S. McNally, New York city, was appointed an accountant in the revenue department at a salary of $5,000, and C. R. Texter, Aspinwall, and J. P. Man Confesses Killing Son, 2

Millersburg, Ohio, Jan. 15 (AP).—James Stenhouse, 39, waited in the county jail today for action by the grand jury on his confession that he slew his two-year-old son because the boy "could not get well."

As Stenhouse waited the grand jury was examining charges that Stenhouse chloroformed the 2-year-old boy because he had a brain infection which at best would leave him mentally deficient.

Stenhouse who was able to keep his secret for more than a year surrendered to the sheriff last Saturday and told of ending the boy's life.

P-T. MEETING MONDAY

An old time spelling bee will feature the January meeting of the Fairfield Parents-Teachers' association Monday evening in the high school building at 7:30 o'clock. It was announced that the spelling bee was introduced as a feature because of the many requests for this form of program. Special music has been arranged.

New books added to our library, "Sweet Land."

PREP AND HIGH SCHOOL GIVEN RECOGNITION

Placed On Accredited List Of Secondary Schools Commission For 1932.

ANNOUNCEMENT IS MADE TODAY

Gettysburg academy and the Gettysburg high school have been accredited for 1932 by the commission on secondary schools of the association of colleges and universities of the middle states and Maryland, according to announcement today by Dr. E. Duncan Grizzell, professor of secondary education at the University of Pennsylvania and chairman of the commission.

The commission on secondary schools serves as a fact-finding and rating agency in preparing a list of accredited schools within its territory and also functions as a clearing-house for information of a professional character concerning these schools.

Any public or private secondary school in New York, New Jersey, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Maryland, the District of Columbia and the Panama Canal Zone may apply for inclusion on the commission's accredited list, but failure to be included on the list does not necessarily imply inefficiency on the part of a school, according to Dr. Grizzell.

No Responsibility
“When the commission acts upon applications from schools seeking to be placed on the accredited list the commission does not assume at present any responsibility beyond that of judging the ability of an efficient secondary school to prepare its students for college work,” Dr. Grizzell stated. “Approval by the commission merely means approval of a school’s ability to prepare its students for college work.”
“Thus, secondary schools which do not appear on the commission’s accredited list may be doing work equally as efficient as those listed, but may be excluded solely because they do not prepare well, or at all, for college entrance. In some instances, the failure of schools to apply for places on the accredited list is responsible for their omission.”

Record-breaking high temperatures in Gettysburg and Adams county during the past two days may be pleasant to the average person who enjoys plenty of sunshine but owners of peach and cherry orchards are not so keen about the weather.

Orchardists, particularly those owning peach, cherry and plum trees, fear that the abnormally high temperatures, if they continue, will cause the sap to rise in the trees and start buds and foliage shooting forth. Such a condition, followed by freezing weather, would wreak havoc to the early fruit, fruit men say.

Apple growers say the present warm weather would not have any damaging effect on the early and commercial apple crops unless the temperatures should remain “up in the air” for a protracted period.

The torrid temperatures will not affect the winter wheat crop in Adams county. That grain is “looking better” now than any time in recent years, one prominent agriculturist said today. Rain and warm temperatures cannot hurt wheat, he added. Such a combination is even better than a blanket of snow over the fields, the man said.

Flowers In Bloom
Garden and wild flowers and bird life have felt the urge of the warm temperatures of the past few days. Mrs. Howard Hartzell, Lincoln Way east, reports violets and pansies in bloom, and Mrs. H. H. Thomas, York street, has calendulas and yellow bellies in blossom. Peonies are shooting green and snapdragons are showing buds.

From Biglerville come a report that song sparrows which usually do not make their appearance until the middle of February, are awing, singing merrily, and flocks of wild geese migrating northward have been seen. Wild geese usually do not go north until March.

Mrs. Fred E. Griest, Quaker Valley, has stock flowers blooming and a butterfly bush is showing yellow. Miss Alice Black, Biglerville, reports a petunia bush in bloom.

Bees and wasps have been reported in Biglerville, and crows flying high are an indication of a continuation of warm weather.

The maximum temperature, Thursday, in Gettysburg was 74 degrees, according to Dr. Henry Stewart, local weather recorder. Thursday was the warmest January 14 in the history of the local weather bureau, records of which go back to 1897.

The mean, or average temperature for January 14 is 57.5 degrees (Continued on Page Two)

NEW STAMPS ON SALE HERE

Washington Bi-Centennial Issues Present Variety Of Colors And Pictures.

New postage stamps issued to commemorate the bi-centennial of the birth of George Washington are on sale at the Gettysburg postoffice it is announced today. In addition, the postoffice has the George Washington 2-cent envelopes on sale.

The stamps, which were placed on sale in the National Capital on January 1, and in other cities since that time, are in a series of twelve, from one-half cent to the ten-cent denomination. These stamps show Washington as he was painted at different times in his life by different artists.

Half-Cent Stamp
The one-half cent stamp is dark brown in color, bearing the likeness of Washington painted by Charles Wilson Peale, the original of which is now in the Metropolitan museum of art. The one-cent stamp, printed in green, is a reproduction of the profile bust by Houdon made in 1785 and onw among the treasures at Mount Vernon. The one and one-half-cent stamp is light brown featuring another Peale portrait of Washington known as the Virginia Colonel, now in possession of Washington and Lee University at Lexington, Virginia.

The stamp which went on sale here today, is the two-cent issue bearing the likeness of George Washington, the Gilbert Stuart Athenaeum portrait done at Germantown in 1796. Already this portrait has become generally known among Americans because of its use on the one-dollar bill.

Purple Stamp
The color of the three-cent stamp is purple and it bears a reproduction of the Peale portrait painted at Valley Forge in 1777 showing Washington in the uniform of a general with a cocked hat. Another Peale (Continued on Page Two)

SEVEN CASES OF DIPHTHERIA IN ADAMS COUNTY

Young Mother And 6-year-old Daughter Among Those Quarantined.

LOCAL BOY HAS SCARLET FEVER

Seven persons in six families in Adams county are suffering from diphtheria, according to Health Officer John Destrack, Biglerville, who quarantined the places in the past week. One home was quarantined today, three on Thursday and the other two were placarded earlier in the week.

Mrs. Melvin Young, 28, of Reading township, and her six-year-old daughter, Betty, are both ill with the malady. Mrs. Mary Huff, 58, Berwick township; Burnell Stambaugh, 6, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Stambaugh, Berwick township, a pupil at Beaver Creek school; George Zinn, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Zinn, Berwick township, a pupil at Green Spring school; Eleanor Laughman, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Laughman, Berwick township, and Lester Emmert, 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Emmert, Conewago township. He attended Midway school.

Scarlet Fever Here
“Billy” Keefeauver, 8-year-old son of Prof. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Keefeauver, Baltimore street, and a pupil in the third grade at the High street building, has contracted scarlet fever. The house has been quarantined.

“Billy's” illness was diagnosed at scarlet fever by Dr. C. G. Crist, Gettysburg, and Dr. J. Moore Campbell, of the state department of health, Harrisburg, Thursday afternoon. The case is described as mild.

Professor Keefeauver, who is supervising principal of the local public schools, was placed in observation quarantine at the home of George P. Black, Baltimore street, for ten days. At the end of that time, he will be allowed to return to his duties.

Child Succumbs
Private funeral services were held Thursday afternoon for Betty Louise Brown, two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brown, Hanover, who died Wednesday afternoon of diphtheria. She is survived by her father and mother, the latter now ill from diphtheria. The child was buried at Mummert's meeting house, near East Berlin.

Pinchot Gives New Yorker a $6,000 Year Job

Harrisburg, Jan. 15 (AP).—Appointment of 70 state employees and dismissal of nine was announced today by the governor's office. Two employees were reinstated.

R. B. Flemming Pittsburgh, was appointed publicity director of the Greater Pennsylvania Council at a salary of $7,500. P. S. McNally, New York city, was appointed an accountant in the revenue department at a salary of $5,000, and C. R. Texter, Aspinwall, and J. P. Woodruff, Bala Cynwyd, were appointed to positions with the Greater Pennsylvania Council at salaries of $6,000.

Man Confesses Killing Son, 2

Millersburg, Ohio, Jan. 15 (AP).—James Stenhouse, 39, waited in the county jail today for action by the grand jury on his confession that he slew his two-year-old son because the boy “could not get well.”

As Stenhouse waited the grand jury was examining charges that Stenhouse chloroformed the 2-year-old boy because he had a brain infection which at best would leave him mentally deficient.

Stenhouse who was able to keep his secret for more than a year surrendered to the sheriff last Saturday and told of ending the boy's life.

An old time spelling bee will feature the January meeting of the Fairfield Parent-Teachers' association Monday evening in the high school building at 7:30 o'clock. It was announced that the spelling bee was introduced as a feature because of the many requests for this form of program. Special music has been arranged.

New books added to our library. “Sweetland.”

The Plaint of Women Who Are "Acid"

There must be something wrong when the lightest tasks exhaust you—when your nerves get so bad that you feel the only relief is a good cry. Nine times in ten it means an acid condition.

Magnesia Oxidized, developed in Germany by a famous pharmaceutical house, correct acidity in the right way. Magnesia Oxidized, upon contact with the acid in the stomach, generate masses of active oxygen. This stimulates the alkaline gastric mucus, checks intestinal putrefaction and promotes bowel regularity—all of which are necessary to the true correction of acidity. Get a package of Magnesia Oxidized today and take two after each meal. See how much better you feel. If not more than surprised with the results, your money back. For sale at all drug stores.

TREMENDOUS PRICE REDUCTIONS

On All Shoes and Rubbers

In every one of HAINES, The Shoe Wizard's Great Chain of Stores.

We have lowered prices anywhere from 50c to $2.00 a pair on shoes on our shelves and new stock replacements. If your salary, income or wages have been cut 1/4 or 1/2, when you buy your shoes from us you are just as well off as you were before, for your money goes so much farther.

Little Men's $2.48 and $2.98 Good-year Welt Shoes now $1.98, 50c and $1.00 saving.

Boys' $2.98 Heavy School Shoes now $1.98. A dollar saving.

Boys' Shoes and Oxfords, all styles, Good-year Welts, every shoe in our stock $2.48. 50c a pair saving.

Men's Goodyear Welt, High, Hunting, Waterproof leather now $4.98. Just $2.00 a pair, saving.

The $4.98 prices, $2.98 and $3.98, $1.00 and $2.00 a pair saving.

All Men's Dress Shoes are down $1.00 a pair:

$2.98 values are $1.98

$3.98 values are $2.98

$1.98 values are $3.98

The same is true of Ladies' Shoes —$1.00 a pair lower in price:

$2.98 values are $1.98

$3.98 values are $2.98

$1.98 values are $3.98

Men's, Women's and Children's Rubbers and Arctics greatly reduced. Remember, we carry first grade Hood Rubbers.

Men's Rubbers, formerly priced at $1.40, and 98c.

Ladies' Rubbers, formerly $1.15, now 85c.

Ladies' Rubber Galoshes, reduced from $1.98 to 98c.

And better Ladies' Galoshes, previously priced to $2.98, down to $1.68.

Men's Rubber Boots that were $4.98 down to $2.98.

During the War we kept our prices $1.00 to $5.00 a pair under the market values of shoes, so today we are doing our best to help in this depression, for we have almost forgotten profit in lowering prices, ever bearing in mind our debt to our customers. Every shoe you buy from HAINES, whether 98c or $3.98, has got to be right in quality for price. For over a quarter of a century this has been our rock ribbed principle and the reason for the Largest Chain of Shoe Stores in America, Owned by an Individual.

House Blocs To Urge Return Of Liquor To States

Washington, Jan. 15 (AP)—Both house anti-prohibition blocs decided today to support a suggested change in the 18th amendment returning liquor control to the states. Both the republican organization for prohibition reform and the old non-partisan group endorsed a bill drafted by Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, and Linthicum, democrat, Maryland.

Hearings will be asked soon before the house judiciary committee.

Likewise both groups directed their executive committees to meet and agree upon some form of a change in the Volstead act to be supported by them.

Smith's Son Is Held After Mishap

New York, Jan. 15 (AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith's youngest son, Walter, was arrested on a technical charge of homicide today in connection with a street accident which police said was entirely unavoidable.

Harry Wallace, 55, resident of the Bowery, was killed when he walked, police said, in front of an automobile young Smith was driving. The technical charge was made as a matter of police routine. Smith's identity was not at once made public and he spent most of the night in the police station.

A hearing was set for a week from today.

TWO GAMES IN ANNEX TONIGHT

Fleet-Wing Will Attempt To Avenge Defeat Of Opening Tilt; First Game At 7.

Some real opposition is promised the Fleet-Wing quintet tonight when the St. Mary's team of York plays a return game here. The tilt will be played immediately following a preliminary game between the Epco tribe and Biglerville. The first game will start at 7 o'clock in the Hotel Gettysburg annex.

The only defeat marring the records of the "Wings" is a 34-24 setback at the hands of the St. Mary's team in the season's opener at York several weeks ago. Five straight wins have been recorded by the locals since that time.

Revenge for this setback and reports that the visitors are "padding up" for this fray, are expected to be enough incentive for the gas men to put up their best exhibition.

The York lineup will be: Wecker and Mohrline, forwards; Kelly, center; Larkins and Griffith, guards. On the reserve list will be Falver, Keefeaver and Payne.

The local lineup will include Charley Gelbert, "Yockey" Bream, "Hen" Bream, Noel Flynn, Art Buehler, Lou Rolly and Norm Werwick.

The Biglerville independents will provide the opposition for the Epco hoopsters in the preliminary tilt.

OFFER AID TO MRS. FORTESCUE

Friends Of Accused Woman Send Messages Of Sympathy And Offer To Help.

Honolulu, Jan. 15 (AP)—Messages of sympathy and encouragement from prominent men and women in the United States to Mrs. Granville Fortescue, one of the four persons charged with the murder of a young naive accused of attacking her daughter, were made public Thursday by defense attorneys.

The name and the messages as announced by Montgomery Winn, defense counsel, were:

Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia: "Dear Gracie—This brings you my love and heartiest sympathy and also my admiration and respect for your magnificent courage in this overwhelming misfortune. I would have done the same thing in your place and so would any other good mother. If there is anything I can do for you or yours, count on me."

Mrs. Breckenridge Long, of Baltimore: "Love and sympathy."

Joseph Patterson, of New York, newspaper publisher: "Admiration and sympathy."

Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, New York: "Dearest Love—Thinking of you constantly."

Katherine McCook Knox, of Washington, daughter-in-law of the late Philander C. Knox, statesman: "Watch the sun break through the clouds."

Thomas Corcoran, Washington—"If we can be of any help, please advise us."

Turner Johnson McKenzie, Chevy Chase, Md.—"Read of your trouble this morning. My father, Representative Johnson, is doing all he can at the Navy department. Is there anything else I can do? If so, please cable immediately. Will be glad to hear in any way."

U. Grant Smith, diplomatic corps, Washington—"Your friends stand with you."

Mrs. Edward McLean, wife of the Washington publisher and neighbor of Mrs. Fortescue—"Dearest Grace: You have all my love and sympathy. If there is anything in the world I can do, don't hesitate to call on me. Devoted love."

Gilbert and Elsie Grosvenor, Chevy Chase, Md.—"Dearest love and sympathy. How can we help?"

May Wilson Preston, New York illustrator—"Love and sympathy is very strong here. Keep up your courage, dear."

Julius Rosenwald Leaves $20,000,000

Chicago, Jan. 15 (AP)—The will of Julius Rosenwald, chairman of Sears, Roebuck and company, was filed in probate court today, showing an estate of $20,000,000.

The Rosenwald family association, which was formed to carry on the philanthropies of the merchant, was bequeathed $11,000,000 and the remainder of the estate was divided equally among the five children.

Rated the underdogs by sport critics who predicted an overwhelming victory for Albright, the Orange and Blue dribblers under the tutelage of Coach Bream outsmarted the Parsons of Albright college, before a capacity audience at Reading, Thursday night, and administered a lacing to the upstate tribe to the tune of 39 to 36. The victory was a sparkling opener for the Gettysburgians and gave them a clean bill of health in the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Basketball league.

The Bullets emerged victorious despite the handicap of a penalty totaling 23 fouls called against them during the pastime, 19 of which were converted into one-point tallies for the Albright cagers.

Captain Seely, who was the high scorer for the Bullets with seven field goals, 14 points, played all but about fifteen seconds, when he was ejected for four personal fouls. Dracha turned in thirteen points for the Bullets, caging five field goals and converting three free throws. The diminutive Reading star was the only Gettysburg man who played the entire game.

Coach Lauds Subs Buohl was the shining light, so far as sensational shooting was concerned. The local dribbler caged two field goals in the closing minutes of the game, giving the Bullets the three-point margin of victory.

Buohl, Howard, Jones and Olkewicz were the other four Bullet passers who were ejected from the fray.

Coach Bream lauded the work of his utility players, attributing the victory as much to their defensive tactics as to the varsity stars.

"They were the shock troops for the Gettysburgians and I am pleased with their work," the local mentor said.

The Bullets upset the smartest basketball critics of the east when they administered the lacing to the Parsons. In the first thirteen minutes of play the Parsons were held to three free throws, the Bullets holding their opponents without a field goal. The first half saw the Bullets on the long end of a 24-18 score. Albright knotted the score at 35-all with four minutes to play. Albright annexed a free throw and Buohl came back with two natty field goals to give the Bullets their opening victory.

CYCLONE KILLS FAMILY OF 7

Mother And Six Children Lose Lives; 5 Other Members Of Family Injured.

Trenton, Tenn., Jan. 15 (AP)—A mother and six of her children were killed and five other members of the family were injured critically near here Thursday when a cyclone demolished the farm home of W. P. Rice.

The dead: Mrs. W. P. Rice, 45; her daughters, Opal, 15; Hazel, 12; Edith, 9; sons, Thomas, 6 months; Junior, 5; and Horace, 7.

The critically injured: W. P. Rice, 45, the father, a broken back; Maryanne, 16, a daughter; James, 3; Lucille Rice, 19, a daughter-in-law, and Elsie McDaniels, 4, a granddaughter.

May Not Recover The injured were removed to a hospital at Dyersville, twenty miles west of here. Most of them were said to have little chance to recover.

The Rice home, which is about eight miles west of Trenton on the road to Dyersville, was the only building greatly damaged by the cyclone. Twelve cattle, five horses and other farm animals were killed.

Members of the Rice family and others in the neighborhood were out of doors when the cyclone swept down on them. All ran for shelter, with the Rices gathering in the house, which was demolished.

Roosevelt Choice in North Dakota As Virginia Assembly Backs Byrd

Valley City, N. D., Jan. 15 (AP)—Governor Roosevelt, of New York, was asked by North Dakota democrats at their convention Thursday to be a presidential candidate in the state primary election March 15.

As cheers rang through the meeting in hall in response to declarations of leaders that the party would campaign militantly to elect him, the New Yorker was indorsed unanimously by a rising vote.

As was the case at county meetings previously, delegates talked Roosevelt virtually all day. Members of the resolutions committee which recommended his indorsement said they found sentiment so unanimous that no other name was mentioned in their deliberations.

As a result of the action, Roosevelt will be asked to allow use of his name in the primary election.

The indorsement came after democratic leaders assailed the republican administration and urged that the party fight to wrest national control from it.

ATTACKERS OF GIRL SOUGHT

Spectacular Manhunt Underway After Girl Reports Battle With Four Men.

Charleroi, Jan. 15 (AP)—The most spectacular manhunt the Monongahela Valley has ever seen is under way for the four men who attacked Mary Storez, a high school girl.

Every available police officer was sent into the hills, state police guarded the highways and scores of armed motorists stopped every suspicious looking machine.

A farmer's guard, organized recently to stop chicken thieves, threw its power behind the search.

Meanwhile, May Henrion, 17, is recovering from a beating she received from two motorists Monday.

The two attacks has aroused citizens and police in Washington, Westmoreland, Fayette and Allegheny counties.

Miss Storez, 18, staggered screaming into her home Thursday night after battling four men on a secluded road. She was returning from school when the men drove up in a dilapidated car and called to her.

She kicked one of her assailants and fled. She was recaptured a few yards away when she stumbled into a tree. After another struggle, in which her screams attracted other motorists, she again broke away.

State police said they had obtained the license number of the automobile.

Miss Henrion has recovered consciousness. She had been in a coma since Monday.

Her father, John Henrion, said she was able to give an excellent description of her attackers and that part of the license number was obtained. It was an Ohio license.

Artificial respiration and stimulants were resorted to and physicians said the girl probably would recover.

$2,500 SOUGHT BY LOCAL Y. W.

Money To Be Used For Administration Work; Meet Next Tuesday.

A campaign to raise a budget of $2,500 for the Gettysburg and Adams county Y. W. C. A. will be staged January 20 to 30, inclusive, Mrs. R. S. Saby, president of the organization, announced today.

The funds raised during the drive will be used entirely for administration work of the Y. Mrs. Saby announced. The revenue from the endowment fund pays all other expenses of upkeep.

To lay the groundwork for the campaign, all solicitors will meet at the Y. building, center square, next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock for inspiration and instructions. Mrs. Saby will preside at the meeting.

The Rev. Howard S. Fox, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will address the solicitors and workers on the subject, "The Y. W. C. A. and The Community." Mrs. M. Hadwin Fischer will lead the music and Mrs. T. J. Winebrenner will conduct the devotionals.

SYNOPSIS: Cattle rustling has involved Gage Preston and his son, Ash, until the range is suspicious, but the Rock boys find a way out of danger. He is working for Gage because he loves Thiry, Preston's daughter, and wants to be her family. But Ash refuses to stop butchering cattle.

Chapter 42

ROCK USES STRATEGY

"Thiry, if you believe I could betray you or them—shoot!" he replied, swiftly.

"You will not tell?" she flashed. "Never. You sure got me wrong."

She gave vent to a shuddering sound. The gun fell from her hands. She swayed. He could see her eyes were tight shut. Then she sank forward, her face on his knees, and, clinging to him, she broke into low sobs, every one of which was like a knife-thrust to Rock.

He let her have it out and stroked her hair and her tight fists, one of which clenched his scarf, the other his coat sleeve. She did not recover soon, though presently the sobs gave way to soft weeping. Then he held her closer, scarcely seeing her or the black pine-streaked gloom or the stretching flares of yellow light along the horizon. He was seeing something blacker than the night, more sinister than the shadows. As a last resource, to save her and her father, he could kill Ash Preston. That would kill Thiry's love, but protect her name and insure a chance for her future happiness. But for Ash, this blundering, thieving work could be halted in time to prevent discovery. The range was lenient. Preston already saw the error of his ways. He could be amenable to any plan. Ash was the stumbling block.

At this brooding juncture of Rock's meditations he became aware that Thiry was stirring. She rose from his knees.

"Can you forgive me?" she whispered.

"Thiry, you talk nonsense sometimes."

"But I might have shot you."

"Sure I thought you were going to."

"I was out of my head. I should have known you would never betray me. My wits were gone. Everything went but a hot terrible fury. Oh, Trueman, I am a Preston."

"Well, I reckon I don't want you anybody else."

"Can any thing be done to save us?" she queried, appealingly.

"It must be done, Thiry. Sure I don't know what. We got time. I'll find some way."

"Oh, Trueman, you are my one hope. To think I've tried to drive you away! . . . That I nearly shot you! . . . How little I know myself. But I do know this—if you stop this selling of stolen beef—if you prevent it before they're arrested—I'll—I'll love you with all my heart and soul."

"Darling, I will do it somehow," promised Rock.

"I'll go now," she said, rising and swaying unsteadily.

"I'm glad now you came to Sunset Pass," she whispered. "But you've added to my fears. It's now you, too, who might fall under the Preston shadow."

"Be brave, Thiry. Don't give up. Never lose faith in me. . . . Good night," he concluded, and, loosening her hand, he kissed it and fled silently into the darkness.

Forty-eight hours later Rock rode into Wagontongue.

Gage Preston had been more than glad to give him leave of absence, sensing no doubt in Rock something not inimical to his precarious fortunes. In a note to Thiry, Rock explained the reason for his going, importuning her to wait patiently and not to be a victim to imagined evils—that somehow he would find a solution.

When Rock dropped in to see Winter it was not with any definite purpose, but that night he and his old friend locked themselves in a room at the hotel. There were range channels open to Winter to which Rock had no access. The Preston situation was graver—actual accusations had been made, it seemed. But by whom was not manifest.

"Sol, old timer, I'm in deep," said Rock at the conclusion of Winter's confidence, and he opened his palms expressively. "Thiry loves me!"

"Do you know anything that makes Preston's guilt shore?"

"Yes, but I promised Thiry not to tell," Rock answered.

"But you can go to Preston and tell him you know. Scare him to sense."

"Sol, Gage Preston can't call his soul his own. I reckon Ash led him into this and now has got him buffaloed. Nothing on earth or in heaven can stop Ash Preston."

"Nothin'?" echoed Winter, but the incredulity of the West rang in his sarcasm.

"Nothin' but lead!"

"Ahuh! . . . Wal, I never yet seen that kind of a hombre miss meetin' it. . . . Now, Rock, I've an idea. If Dabb an' Lincoln know what I know—an' it's a good bet they know more—they will tell you. They obviate any broken promise on your part. Dabb is human. Lincoln is the whitest man in these parts. They're both rich, an' they rule the Cattle Association. Hesbitt is only president. What Dabb an' Lincoln say is law. . . . Now you go to them."

"But, Sol, good Heavens! What for?"

"If you can get Dabb an' Lincoln to sympathize with you an' Thiry, they'll be sympathizin' with Preston. Ten years ago there was a case somethin' like this. Wal, his friends got him to make good what he'd stole an' saved him from jail. If no worse. Preston's case ain't so bad, thet is yet. . . . If you've got the nerve an' the wit you can keep Preston from ruin an' Thiry from a broken heart."

Rock leaped up, inspired, suddenly on fire with the vision Winter's sagacity had conjured up. He pushed aside table and chair and hugged his startled friend.

"Old-timer, I've sure got the nerve and you've supplied the wit."

Rock presented himself at Dabb's office the next morning.

"Hello, Rock!" replied Dabb in answer to his greeting. "Have a chair and a cigar. I've been hopin' you'd run into town."

Dabb appeared cordial.

"How's Amy?" queried Rock.

"She as fit as a filly when I saw her last. She went to Denver to visit. Expect her home next week."

"John, I told you I was in love with Thiry. Well, that wasn't so bad. But now she's in love with me. And the situation is hell."

"Man, you've only yourself to blame. You were advised not to go. I myself told you not to stay."

"I loved the girl," replied Rock, simply.

"Humph!" said Dabb, chewing at his cigar. "Rock, some of us cattlemen know you haven't looked for anythin' shady about Preston."

"How do you know?" asked Rock.

"Well, that question came up the other night at our Association meeting. Hesbitt gave you a hard run. Over this Preston scandal. Tom Lincoln an' I an' one or two others took exceptions to Hesbitt. We claimed you not only weren't in with Preston on anythin' crooked, but you hadn't trailed around lookin' for it. The reason, of course, was you were sweet on Thiry Preston."

"John, that was most damned good of you," returned Rock, warmly. "You an' Lincoln figured that if I had looked for shady work I'd have found it?"

"Sure. We knew that. No outfit could fool you."

"Well, what then?"

"Not so easy. But personally I believe you'd have come to me for advice an' help."

"I don't know that I'd have presumed so far," went on Rock.

"Hesbitt's outfits are after Preston," replied Rock, and he gave Dabb a detailed account of Dunne's maneuver at the Notch camp and what had come of it.

"You dared that foreman Dunne to throw his gun?" exclaimed Dabb, gravely.

"I sure did."

"Rock, that was a bad move an' a wise one. I'm darn glad you told me this. Reckon it didn't seem important to you—that I knew—for you'd have told it quick. But it is important."

"How so?" asked Rock, curiously.

"Well, in the first place it vindicates Lincoln an' me in our stand for you. An' it will stump Hesbitt."

"Ahuh! Then this new rancher is dead set against Preston?"

"Is he? Well, I guess. An' he has his outfits rarin'."

"Now Rock, the strange thing is Hesbitt has been losin' a good deal of stock most Half Moon brand—an' his men can't locate them. Hide nor hair! . . . But other men have!"

"Dabb, what're you tellin' me?" shouted Rock, fiercely.

"Rock, now listen. You once rode for Jim Slagle. Preston ruined Slagle. An' Slagle has hung around out there to get even. Reckon he's in a fair way to do it. For he has tracked the Prestons down."

"Aw, this's awful!" groaned Rock. "Jim Slagle. . . . An' he has tracked Prestons down? What to, John?"

Dabb offers a solution to Rock's problem, in Monday's installment. But there are complications for Rock.

Hollywood

Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Studio archives are replete with histories of how forgotten stars went on the toboggan because of poor stories.

A recent example, although far from the last ride to oblivion, is Ruth Chatterton, whose popularity has suffered because of a series of unsatisfactory films, but who may regain her former position under her new contract.

Those unhappy stories are given as a main reason for her desertion of Paramount to go to Warner Brothers.

Last autumn there were rumors aplenty that Ann Harding was dissatisfied with the starring vehicle selected for her by her studio. The reports that she was protesting vigorously against appearing in "Prestige" have been confirmed, now that the film is completed, by the star herself.

Played Her Part

The picture was made, Miss Harding played her part—her intimates knew how reluctantly—only because her contract contained no loophole of escape.

"Prestige" in preview seems to uphold Miss Harding's judgment. Despite her objections, she gives as workmanlike a performance of her role as could be expected, but she has little to do.

Tay Garnett's direction is good, there is a distinguished cast, and the location trip to Florida yielded a few beautiful scenes. Still preview critics wondered, along with Miss Harding, just why the picture was made.

Gets the Pictures

Production bosses in a certain studio were adhering to schedule so rigidly that the publicity department, pressed for new photographs of the two co-stars, could not wedge in a sitting.

A young publicist was charged with the task of getting those pictures. He worked and worked, without result. Always something interfered.

But one day shortly before the "deadline" he reported to his chief in high glee—he had 16 new ones; How?

"The sound stage caught fire!" he confided. "Grabbed those two stars and rushed them over to the gallery while the stage was burning."

PLAYING CARD

SALES INCREASE

Racine, Wis. (AP)—Playing-card sales suffered no slump in 1931, according to internal revenue reports for Wisconsin. A tax of 10 cents a deck on 6,243,913 decks of cards was collected by the government last year. The sales were $432,912 in 1930.

SYNOPSIS: Cattle rustling has involved Gage Preston and his son, Ash, until the range is suspicious, but Trueman Rock hopes to find a way out of danger. He is working for Gage because he loves Thiry, Preston's daughter, and wants to save her family. But Ash refuses to stop butchering cattle.

Chapter 42

ROCK USES STRATEGY

"Thiry, if you believe I could betray you or them—shoot!" he replied, swiftly.

"You will not tell?" she flashed.

"Never. You sure got me wrong."

She gave vent to a shuddering sound. The gun fell from her hands. She swayed. He could see her eyes were tight shut. Then she sank forward, her face on his knees, and, clinging to him, she broke into low sobs, every one of which was like a knife-thrust to Rock.

He let her have it out and stroked her hair and her tight fists, one of which clenched his scarf, the other his coat sleeve. She did not recover soon, though presently the sobs gave way to soft weeping. Then he held her closer, scarcely seeing her or the black pine-streaked gloom or the stretching flares of yellow light along the horizon. He was seeing something blacker than the night, more sinister than the shadows. As a last resource, to save her and her father, he could kill Ash Preston. That would kill Thiry's love, but protect her name and insure a chance for her future happiness. But for Ash, this blundering, thieving work could be halted in time to prevent discovery. The range was lenient. Preston already saw the error of his ways. He could be amenable to any plan. Ash was the stumbling block.

At this brooding juncture of Rock's meditations he became aware that Thiry was stirring. She arose from her knees.

"Can you forgive me?" she whispered.

"Thiry, you talk nonsense sometimes."

"But I might have shot you."

"Sure I thought you were going to."

"I was out of my head. I should have known you would never betray us. . . . My wits were gone. Everything went but a hot terrible fury. Oh, Trueman, I am a Preston."

"Well, I reckon I don't want you anybody else."

"Can any thing be done to save us?" she queried, appealingly.

"It must be done, Thiry. Sure I don't know what. We got time. I'll find some way."

"Oh, Trueman, you are my one hope. To think I've tried to drive you away! . . . That I nearly shot you! . . . How little I know myself. But I do know this—if you stop this selling of stolen beef—if you prevent it before they're arrested—I'll love you with all my heart and soul."

"Darling, I will do it somehow," promised Rock.

"I'll go now," she said, rising and swaying unsteadily.

"I'm glad now you came to Sunset Pass," she whispered. "But you've added to my fears. It's now you, too, who might fall under the Preston shadow."

"Be brave, Thiry. Don't give up. . . . Never lose faith in me. . . . Good night," he concluded, and, losing her hand, he kissed it and fled silently into the darkness.

Forty-eight hours later Rock rode into Wagon Tongue.

Gage Preston had been more than glad to give him leave of absence, sensing no doubt in Rock something not inimical to his precarious fortunes. In a note to Thiry, Rock explained the reason for his going, importuning her to wait patiently and not to be a victim to imagined evils—that somehow he would find a solution.

When Rock dropped in to see Winter it was not with any definite purpose, but that night he and his old, friend locked themselves in a room at the hotel. There were range channels open to Winter to which Rock had no access. The Preston situation was graver—actual accusations had been made. It seemed. But by whom was not manifest.

"Sol, old timer, I'm in deep," said Rock at the conclusion of Winter's confidence, and he opened his palms expressively. "Thiry loves me!"

"Do you know anything that makes Preston's guilt shore?"

"Yes, but I promised Thiry not to tell," Rock answered.

"But you can go to Preston and tell him you know. Scare him to sense."

"Sol, Gage Preston can't call his soul his own. I reckon Ash led him into this and now has got him baffled. Nothing on earth or in heaven can stop Ash Preston."

"Nothin'?" echoed Winter, but the incredulity of the West rang in his sarcasm.

"Nothin' but lead!"

"Ahu! . . . Wal, I never yet seen that kind of a hombre miss meetin' it. . . . Now, Rock, I've an idea. If Dabb an' Lincoln know what I know—an' it's a good bet they know more—they will tell you. They obviates any broken promise on your part. Dabb is human. Lincoln is the whitest man in these parts. They're both rich, an' they rule the Cattle Association. Hesbitt is only president. What Dabb an' Lincoln say is law. . . . Now you go to them."

"But, Sol, good Heavens! What for?"

"If you can get Dabb an' Lincoln to sympathize with you an' Thiry, they'll be sympathizin' with Preston. Ten years ago there was a case somethin' like this. Wal, his friends got him to make good what he'd stole an' saved him from jail, if no worse. Preston's case ain't so bad, that is yet. . . . If you've got the nerve an' the wit you can keep Preston from ruin an' Thiry from a broken heart."

Rock leaped up, inspired, suddenly on fire with the vision Winter's sagacity had conjured up. He pushed aside table and chair and hugged his startled friend.

"Old-timer, I've sure got the nerve and you've supplied the wit."

Rock presented himself at Dabb's office the next morning.

"Hello, Rock!" replied Dabb in answer to his greeting. "Have a chair and a cigar. I've been hopin' you'd run into town."

Dabb appeared cordial. "How's Amy?" queried Rock.

"She as fit as a filly when I saw her last. She went to Denver to visit. Expect her home next week."

"John, I told you I was in love with Thiry. Well, that wasn't so bad. But now she's in love with me. And the situation is hell!"

"Man, you've only yourself to blame. You were advised not to go. I myself told you not to stay."

"I loved the girl," replied Rock, simply.

"Humph!" said Dabb, chewing at his cigar. "Rock, some of us cattlemen know you haven't looked for anythin' shady about Preston."

"How do you know?" asked Rock.

"Well, that question came up the other night at our Association meeting. Hesbitt gave you a hard rub. Over this Preston scandal. Tom Lincoln an' I an' one or two others took exceptions to Hesbitt. We claimed you not only weren't in with Preston on anythin' crooked, but you hadn't trailed around lookin' for it. The reason, of course, was you were sweet on Thiry Preston."

"John, that was most damned good of you," returned Rock, warmly. "You an' Lincoln figured that if I had looked for shady work I'd have found it?"

"Sure. We knew that. No outfit could fool you."

"Well, what then?"

"Not so easy. But personally I believe you'd have come to me for advice an' help."

"I don't know that I'd have presumed so far," went on Rock.

"Hesbitt's outfits are after Preston," replied Rock, and he gave Dabb a detailed account of Dunne's maneuver at the Notch camp and what had come of it.

"You dared that foreman Dunne to throw his gun?" exclaimed Dabb, gravely.

"I sure did."

"Rock, that was a bad move an' a wise one. I'm darn glad you told me this. Reckon it didn't seem important to you—that I knew—for you'd have told it quick. But it is important."

"How so?" asked Rock, curiously.

"Well, in the first place it vindicates Lincoln an' me in our stand for you. An' it will stump Hesbitt."

"Ahu! Then this new rancher is dead set against Preston?"

"Is he? Well, I guess. An' he has his outfits rarin' . . . Now Rock, the strange thing is Hesbitt has been losin' a good deal of stock most Half Moon brand—an' his men can't locate them. Hide nor hair! . . . But other men have!"

"Dabb, what're you tellin' me?" shouted Rock, fiercely.

"Rock, now listen. You once rode for Jim Slagle. Preston ruined Slagle. An' Slagle has hung around out there to get even. Reckon he's in a fair way to do it. For he has tracked the Prestons down."

"Aw, this's awful!" groaned Rock. "Jim Slagle. . . . An' he has tracked Prestons down? What to, John?"

Dabb offers a solution to Rock's problem, in Monday's installment. But there are complications for Rock.

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By Robbin Coons

Hollywood—Studio archives are replete with histories of how forgotten stars went on the toboggan because of poor stories.

A recent example, although far from the last ride to oblivion, is Ruth Chatterton, whose popularity has suffered because of a series of unsatisfactory films, but who may regain her former position under her new contract.

Those unhappy stories are given as a main reason for her desertion of Paramount to go to Warner Brothers.

Last autumn there were rumors aplenty that Ann Harding was dissatisfied with the starring vehicle selected for her by her studio. The reports that she was protesting vigorously against appearing in "Prestige" have been confirmed, now that the film is completed, by the star herself.

Played Her Part

The picture was made, Miss Harding played her part—her intimates knew how reluctantly—only because her contract contained no loophole of escape.

"Prestige" in preview seems to uphold Miss Harding's judgment. Despite her objections, she gives as workmanlike a performance of her role as could be expected, but she has little to do.

Tay Garnett's direction is good, there is a distinguished cast, and the location trip to Florida yielded a few beautiful scenes. Still preview critics wondered, along with Miss Harding, just why the picture was made.

Gets the Pictures

Production bosses in a certain studio were adhering to schedule so rigidly that the publicity department, pressed for new photographs of the two co-stars, could not wedge in a sitting.

A young publicist was charged with the task of getting those pictures. He worked and worked, without result. Always something interfered.

But one day shortly before the "deadline" he reported to his chief in high glee—he had 13 new ones; How?

"The sound stage caught fire!" he confided. "Grabbed those two stars and rushed them over to the gallery while the stage was burning."

PLAYING CARD

Racine, Wis. (AP)—Playing-card sales suffered no slump in 1931, according to internal revenue reports for Wisconsin. A tax of 10 cents a deck on 6,243,913 decks of cards was collected by the government last year. The sales were 4,632,912 in 1930.

MAKES STANCHION

Fairfax, Okla. (AP)—Barney Wilson, farmer near here, had an old iron bedstead and needed a stanchion for a dairy cow. In an hour's time with a hacksaw and a few bolts and chains he fashioned the stanchion out of the curved head and foot of the bed.

House Blocs To Urge Return Of Liquor To States

Washington, Jan. 15 (AP)—Both house anti-prohibition blocs decided today to support a suggested change in the 18th amendment returning liquor control to the states.

Both the republican organization for prohibition reform and the old non-partisan group endorsed a bill drafted by Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, and Linthicum, democrat, Maryland.

Hearings will be asked soon before the house judiciary committee.

Likewise both groups directed their executive committees to meet and agree upon some form of a change in the Volstead act to be supported by them.

Harry Wallace, 55, resident of the Bowers, was killed when he walked, police said, in front of an automobile young Smith was driving. The technical charge was made as a matter of police routine. Smith's identity was not at once made public and he spent most of the night in the police station.

A hearing was set for a week from today.

TWO GAMES IN ANNEX TONIGHT

Fleet-Wing Will Attempt To Avenge Defeat Of Opening Tilt; First Game At 7.

Some real opposition is promised the Fleet-Wing quintet tonight when the St. Mary's team of York plays a return game here. The tilt will be played immediately following a preliminary game between the Epco tribe and Biglerville. The first game will start at 7 o'clock in the Hotel Gettysburg annex.

The only defeat marring the records of the "Wings" is a 34-24 setback at the hands of the St. Mary's team in the season's opener at York several weeks ago. Five straight wins have been recorded by the locals since that time.

Revenge for this setback and reports that the visitors are "padding up" for this fray, are expected to be enough incentive for the gas men to put up their best exhibition.

The York lineup will be: Wecker and Mohrlin, forwards; Kelly, center; Larkins and Griffith, guards. On the reserve list will be Falver, Keefe and Payne.

The local lineup will include Charley Gilbert, "Yockey" Bream, "Hen" Bream, Noel Flynn, Art Buehler, Lou Kelly and Norm Wernick.

The Biglerville Independents will provide the opposition for the Epco hoopers in the preliminary tilt.

Friends Of Accused Woman Send Messages Of Sympathy And Offer To Help.

Honolulu, Jan. 15 (AP)—Messages of sympathy and encouragement from prominent men and women in the United States to Mrs. Granville Fortescue, one of the four persons charged with the murder of a young naive accused of attacking her daughter, were made public Thursday by defense attorneys.

The name and the messages as announced by Montgomery Winn, of defense counsel, were:

Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, of Philadelphia: "Dear Grace—This brings you my love and heartiest sympathy and also my admiration and respect for your magnificent courage in this overwhelming misfortune. I would have done the same thing in your place and so would any other good mother. If there is anything I can do for you or yours, count on me."

Mrs. Breckenridge Long, of Baltimore: "Love and sympathy."

Joseph Patterson, of New York, newspaper publisher: "Admiration and sympathy."

Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, New York: "Dearest Love—Thinking of you constantly."

Katherine McCook Knox, of Washington, daughter-in-law of the late Philander C. Knox, statesman: "Watch the sun break through the clouds."

Thomas Corcoran, Washington: "If we can be of any help, please advise us."

Turner Johnson McKenzie, Chevy Chase, Md.: "Read of your trouble this morning. My father, Representative Johnson, is doing all he can at the Navy department. Is there anything else I can do? If so, please cable immediately. Will be glad to hear in any way."

U. Grant Smith, diplomatic corps, Washington: "Your friends stand with you."

Mrs. Edward McLean, wife of the Washington publisher and neighbor of Mrs. Fortescue: "Dearest Grace: You have all my love and sympathy. If there is anything in the world I can do, don't hesitate to call on me. Devoted love."

Gilbert and Elsie Grosvenor, Chevy Chase, Md.: "Dearest love and sympathy. How can we help?"

May Wilson Preston, New York illustrator: "Love and sympathy is very strong here. Keep up your courage, dear."

Rated the underdogs by sport critics who predicted an overwhelming victory for Albright, the Orange and Blue dribblers under the tutelage of Coach Bream outsmarted the Parsons of Albright college, before a capacity audience at Reading, Thursday night, and administered a lacing to the upstate tribe to the tune of 39 to 36.

The victory was a sparkling opener for the Gettysburgians and gave them a clean bill of health in the Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Basketball league.

The Bullets emerged victorious despite the handicap of a penalty totaling 23 fouls called against them during the pastime, 19 of which were converted into one-point tallies for the Albright cagers.

Captain Seely, who was the high scorer for the Bullets with seven field goals, 14 points, played all but about fifteen seconds, when he was ejected for four personal fouls. Drachma turned in thirteen points for the Bullets, caging five field goals and converting three free throws. The diminutive Reading star was the only Gettysburg man who played the entire game.

Coach Lauds Subs

Buohl was the shining light, so far as sensational shooting was concerned. The local dribbler caged two field goals in the closing minutes of the game, giving the Bullets the three-point margin of victory.

Buohl, Howard, Jones and Olkewicz were the other four Bullets passus who were ejected from the fray.

Coach Bream lauded the work of his utility players, attributing the victory as much to their defensive tactics as to the varsity stars.

"They were the shock troops for the Gettysburgians and I am pleased with their work," the local mentor said.

The Bullets upset the smartest basketball critics of the east when they administered the lacing to the Parsons. In the first thirteen minutes of play the Parsons were held to three free throws, the Bullets holding their opponents without a field goal. The first half saw the Bullets on the long end of a 24-18 score. Albright knotted the score at 35-all with four minutes to play. Albright annexed a free throw and Buohl came back with two natty field goals to give the Bullets their opening victory.

CYCLONE KILLS FAMILY OF 7

Mother And Six Children Lose Lives; 5 Other Members Of Family Injured.

Trenton, Tenn., Jan. 15 (AP)—A mother and six of her children were killed and five other members of the family were injured critically near here Thursday when a cyclone demolished the farm home of W. P. Rice.

The dead:

Mrs. W. P. Rice, 45; her daughter, Opal, 15; Hazel, 12; Edith, 9; sons, Thomas, 6 months; Junior, 5; and Horace, 7.

The critically injured:

W. P. Rice, 45, the father, a broken back; Maryanne, 16, a daughter; James, 3; Mrs. Lucille Rice, 19, a daughter-in-law, and Elsie McDaniels, 4, a granddaughter.

May Not Recover

The injured were removed to a hospital at Dyersville, twenty miles west of here. Most of them were said to have little chance to recover.

The Rice home, which is about eight miles west of Trenton on the road to Dyersville, was the only building greatly damaged by the cyclone. Twelve cattle, five horses and other farm animals were killed.

Members of the Rice family and others in the neighborhood were out of doors when the cyclone swept down on them. All ran for shelter, with the Rices gathering in the house, which was demolished.

Paris (AP)—The St. Lazare women's prison is to be torn down and when it goes the next to the last monument of the French revolution will vanish. The Conciergerie is the only other authentic building of that time. Royalists were kept in St. Lazare until their time came to meet "the widow", that invention of Dr. Guillotin which still writes finis for condemned criminals.

JOBLESS OPPOSE TAX RAISE

York, Jan. 15 (AP)—More than 4,000 persons, most of them jobless, marched to city hall today to protest to council against a recent increase in the city tax rate from eight and one-half to nine and one-half mills. Council listened to the leaders of the crowd and then continued with routine business.

BEAVER TRAPPED BY TREE

Lansing, Mich. (AP)—Woodsmen are not the only ones occasionally caught by falling trees. Wesley Miller came upon a live beaver that had been caught by a tree that had been completely severed at the base. The beaver was released.

The first oil well in the United States produced 30 barrels a day for one year.

Roosevelt Choice in North Dakota As Virginia Assembly Backs Byrd

Valley City, N. D., Jan. 15 (AP)—Governor Roosevelt, of New York, was asked by North Dakota democrats at their convention Thursday to be a presidential candidate in the state primary election March 15.

As cheers rang through the meeting hall in response to declarations of leaders that the party would campaign militantly to elect him, the New Yorker was endorsed unanimously by a rising vote.

As was the case at county meetings previously, delegates talked Roosevelt virtually all day. Members of the resolutions committee which recommended his endorsement said they found sentiment so unanimous that no other name was mentioned in their deliberations.

As a result of the action, Roosevelt will be asked to allow use of his name in the primary election.

The endorsement came after democratic leaders assailed the republican administration and urged that the party fight to wrest national control from it.

ATTACKERS OF GIRL SOUGHT

Spectacular Manhunt Underway After Girl Reports Battle With Four Men.

Charlottesville, Jan. 15 (AP)—The most spectacular manhunt the Monongahela Valley has ever seen is under way for the four men who attacked Mary Storcz, a high school girl.

Every available police officer was sent into the hills, state police guarded the highways and scores of armed motorists stopped every suspicious looking machine.

A farmer's guard, organized recently to stop chicken thieves, threw its power behind the search.

Meanwhile, Mary Henrion, 17, is recovering from a beating she received from two motorists Monday.

The two attacks has aroused citizens and police in Washington, Westmoreland, Fayette and Allegheny counties.

Miss Storcz, 18, staggered screaming into her home Thursday night after battling four men on a secluded road. She was returning from school when the men drove up in a dilapidated car and called to her.

She kicked one of her assailants and fled. She was recaptured a few yards away when she stumbled into a tree. After another struggle, in which her screams attracted other motorists, she again broke away.

State police said they had obtained the license number of the automobile.

Miss Henrion has recovered consciousness. She had been in a coma since Monday.

Her father, John Henrion, said she was able to give an excellent description of her attackers and that part of the license number was obtained. It was an Ohio license.

Artificial respiration and stimulants were resorted to and physicians said the girl probably would recover.

$2,500 SOUGHT BY LOCAL Y. W.

Money To Be Used For Administration Work; Meet Next Tuesday.

A campaign to raise a budget of $2,500 for the Gettysburg and Adams county Y. W. C. A. will be staged January 20 to 30, inclusive, Mrs. R. S. Saby, president of the organization, announced today.

The funds raised during the drive will be used entirely for administration work of the Y. Mrs. Saby announced. The revenue from the endowment fund pays all other expenses of upkeep.

To lay the groundwork for the campaign, all solicitors will meet at the Y. building, center square, next Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock for inspiration and instructions. Mrs. Saby will preside at the meeting.

The Rev. Howard S. Fox, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, will address the solicitors and workers on the subject, "The Y. W. C. A. and The Community." Mrs. M. Hadwin Fischer will lead the music and Mrs. T. J. Wrenbrenner will conduct the devotionals.

to that Thursday's temperature was 30.6 degrees in excess of the mean. The coolest weather on Thursday was 41 degrees.

On Wednesday the maximum temperature was 72 degrees, while the minimum was 44. The mean temperature for January 13 was 58 degrees, so that the temperature that day this year was 29.8 degrees in excess.

Rain today was expected to be followed by most seasonal weather. Physicians hope the weatherman will revise his figures downward in the next few days so as to eliminate the possibility of an epidemic of colds and communicable diseases.

New Stamps

portrait done the same year, known as the Rhinebeck Portrait, will appear on the four-cent stamp in brown. The five-cent stamp in blue features the Washington portrait now owned by the New York historical society.

The six-cent stamp in orange shows the portrait painted by Trumbull in 1792. The head and bust of the Trumbull portrait done in 1780 appears on the seven-cent stamp in black, while the eight-cent stamp of olive green is a reproduction of the crayon drawing made from life of Charles B. J. F. Saint-Memin.

The nine-cent stamp is pink showing a reproduction of the past portrait painted from life by W. Williams in 1794, while the last of the series, the ten-cent stamp in color and the portrait is taken from the Gilbert Stuart painting made in 1795, known as the Vaughan portrait.

Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God,
in the mountain of his holiness.
Beautiful for situation, the joy
of the whole earth, is mount Zion,
on the sides of the north, the city
of the great King.
God is known in her palaces for
a refuge.
For, lo, the kings were assembled, they passed by together.
They saw it, and so they marveled; they were troubled, and hasted away.
Fear took hold upon them
there, and pain, as of a woman
in travail.
Thou breakest the ships of Tarshish with an east wind.
As we have heard, so have we seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God: God
will establish it for ever. Selah.
We have thought of thy loving kindness, O God, in the midst of thy temple.
According to thy name, O God,
so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of righteousness.
Let mount Zion rejoice, let the daughters of Judah be glad, because of thy judgments.
Walk about Zion, and go round
about her: tell the towers thereof.
Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces: that ye may tell
it to the generation following.
For this God is our God for ever and ever: he will be our guide
even unto death.

FEAR
The American psychologist, Watson, maintains that a child at birth is instinctively afraid of but two things. It fears loud noises and the sudden loss of support, that is, falling.
It is interesting to speculate why loud noises and falling should be instinctive fears.
Perhaps it is because since man's earliest experiences, noise and falling represented two ever-present dangers and the reactions thereto
were of a vitally protective nature.
As civilization grew the varieties of fears to which man became subject increased.
H. G. Wells aptly observes, "In civilized life the tendency is constant to attain fears to states of mind rather than to possible injury to the body."
"People come to accept discomfort, privation and even death in preference to social disgrace, unfavorable publicity, scandal, loss of prestige, or being out of fashion."
Fear may be said to be the parent of caution and of reflection. In reverse, improper reflection may engender fear.

HISTORY OF ADAMS COUNTY

A Chronological Review Of Things That Have Gone Before, And The Trials And Tribulations Of Our Ancestors, As Published Serially For The Benefit Of Gettysburg Times' Readers.

Medical Society, continued

Isaac W. Pearson, a native of Adams county, born June 6, 1824; commenced the study of medicine in 1848 and practice in 1850 in York Springs. His ancestors came with William Penn.

Alfred Myers, born in Baltimore;
a graduate of Jefferson medical college in March, 1875; residence, Hampton.

D. H. Melhorn, born in Adams county; a graduate of Jefferson medical college in March, 1882; residence, New Chester.

Agideous Noel, a native of Adams county; graduate of the University of Maryland in March, 1862; residence, Bonneauville.

John W. C. O'Neal, born in Virginia; was educated in the grammar schools and in Pennsylvania college, Gettysburg; received his degree of M.D. at the University of Maryland in March, 1844; practiced medicine in Hanover from 1844 to 1849, then practiced in Baltimore from 1849 to 1863, and in Hanover for a time, when he removed to Gettysburg, his present home, where he is still in the practice of his chosen profession. By right of priority, at least, he stands at the head of the long column of men eminent in the profession in this county.

Dr. O'Neal
Walter H. O'Neal, born in Baltimore, educated in Pennsylvania college, Gettysburg; attended medical department University of Maryland; graduated in 1871; appointed medical attendant for the county in 1872; served six years and returned to Gettysburg, his present residence, and took charge of his father's extensive practice.

Jacob R. Plank, born in Cumberland county; graduated from Washington Medical college in July, 1873; residence, York Springs.

R. Milton Plank, a native of Cumberland county, graduated in March, 1880, at College of Physicians and Surgeons, Baltimore; residence, York Springs.

George L. Rice, born in Baltimore;
a graduate of Washington university, Baltimore, in February, 1872; residence, McSherrytown; a man learned in his profession, and much esteemed in private life.

Charles H. Rupp, a native of York county, commenced practice in 1863 and has been in continuous practice to date.

C. K. Rether, born in Adams county, graduated in 1884 from Jefferson college, residence, Biglerville.

J. L. Sheetz, born in Berks county, received his degree of M.D. in March 1879, at the University of Pennsylvania; resides in New Oxford.

Joseph W. Smith, a native of York county, graduated from Bellevue Medical college, New York, in March, 1870; residence, New Oxford.

Charles E. Smith, born in York county, graduated from Bellevue
Medical college, March 9, 1873; residence, Center Mills.

R. S. Seiss, born in Frederick propounded an interesting hypothesis as to the origin of fear and fear behavior.

He maintained that in the case of "a man who runs away because he is afraid" this statement expressing the relationship between cause and effect is in improper order.

He contended, contrary to common belief, that the man does not run away because he fears, but rather that he fears because he runs away.

It should therefore be possible,
according to this theory, to eliminate fear by training men to behave in certain patterns. Their physical behavior would cause
them to be fearless.

Undoubtedly a good deal of military training is directed to this end.

Recent studies, however, particularly those of Cannon, tend to cast doubt upon the validity of James' hypothesis.

Farmer Killed
By Express Train

Egg Harbor, N. J., Jan. 15.—Meyer
Rosenberg, 48, a farmer of Delaware township, near here, was killed shortly before noon Thursday when he drove his truck in front of a speeding Reading company express train at the Frankford avenue grade
crossing, within sight of his home.

Meyer was driving parallel to the railroad tracks and apparently swung his machine across the right of way without looking behind.
The locomotive, speeding at seventy-five miles an hour, demolished

the machine and went nearly a half mile before it could be brought to a halt.

The impact damaged the locomotive so seriously that the train was held up for more than an hour while repairs were made. The cow-catcher was driven downward into the roadbed, and the air-brake system was badly damaged. The train had left Atlantic City at 11:30 a. m.
and was due in Egg Harbor at 11:49.

Frontier Nurses on Horseback Combat Disease and Poverty in Isolated Regions of Country

The novel methods by which a handful of women nurses have in six years brought medical care to a remote rural area, typical of many in the United States, where no doctor could make a living and the people were too ignorant and poor to care for themselves, are described in a study just published by the Committee on the Costs of Medical Care.

The study gives a glimpse of one of America's still-existing frontier regions in the back country of Kentucky, where social and health conditions were all but medieval and where it costs a dollar a mile to bring a doctor into the wilderness on a visit.

In a part of this district the Frontier Nursing service maintains its health outposts, whence nurse-midwives ride out on horseback to combat squallor, ignorance and disease. The study, by Anne Winslow, executive secretary of the Frontier Nursing service, tells how these women have succeeded at moderate cost in providing midwifery, nursing, surgical, medical, dental, hospital and social services for the region.

The Committee on the Costs of Medical Care brought out Miss Winslow's study of its activities as one of its "Miscellaneous Contributions" because such regions come within the scope of the committee's five-year investigation, now nearing completion, into the problem of the delivery of adequate, scientific medical service to all the people, rich and poor, at a cost which can be reasonably met by them in their respective stations in life.

The portion of the frontier on which the service operates lies in Leslie, Perry, Clay and Bell counties, Kentucky. The organization was established through the work of Mrs. Mary Breckenridge, a graduate nurse, who made the first survey of 1924, with a view to determining the health needs of the region and devising a way to meet them. Her visit was followed in 1925 by a survey in Leslie county by Miss Bertram Ireland in conjunction with the state board of health of Kentucky, to check up on unreported births and deaths.

Dollar-A-Mile Doctors
At the time, Miss Winslow writes: "There was no physician in Leslie county, and in one contiguous area of three counties surveyed there were 15,000 people without one registered physician. In this area it took the nearest doctor six to twenty hours on horseback to reach a patient. Necessarily, the average fee of one dollar a mile was prohibitive for any but a few families; the average total income per capita was under $143 a year."

Doctors charged one dollar a mile to call due to the unusual conditions, namely, that a single call often meant an overnight trip, none of the towns were on railroads, none of the counties were connected with the outside world by automobile roads and: "The customary mode of travel and often the only possible one was on horseback along such roads or trails as existed, through creek beds and over the ridges of mountains."

Typhoid-Hookworm-Tuberculosis
"Epidemics of typhoid fever, diphtheria and smallpox occurred frequently. Owing to their ignorance of any form of sanitation, the people were riddled with hookworm. There was no ventilation in the cabins; babies and children slept with their parents, and tuberculosis invaded whole families."

The birthrate was almost twice that of Kentucky as a whole, and while the deathrate was officially reported as lower, this was probably because many of the natives died in the back country, without medical attendance, and without any record. Unrecorded deaths were estimated to be about 35 per cent of the number recorded. Deaths from preventable diseases constituted more than half of the total.

Native midwives, whose age averaged about 60 years and who were untrained and unqualified for their calling, and self-styled "doctors" practiced among these people.

After Mrs. Breckenridge had visited the region she decided, writes Miss Winslow, "that the health of mothers and children was the most urgent problem and that the situation called for trained nurse-midwives, who might combine a program of public health and bedside nursing with midwifery."

The Frontier Nursing service grew out of this belief. It consists at present of 28 nurses, on duty at nine nursing centers. There is also an eighteen bed hospital, built three years ago.

Health Posts Ten Miles Apart

Two nurses are stationed at each of the centers, and three at the hospital. The centers are houses equipped with living accommodations for the nurses and a clinic for patients.

The nurses at a center divide between them an area of about 78 square miles, and each of these women covers her own district on horseback.

She is equipped with two sets of saddlebags, one with material for general nursing, the other for obstetrical work. On the basis of their midwifery training, the state health officer gives the frontier nurses special licenses to care for normal deliveries. A collaborating medical advisory committee drew up a "medical routine" which also authorizes the nurses to give certain treatments and medications pending the arrival of a doctor.

Scattered through neighboring counties are a few doctors who can be called upon whenever necessary, and there is a surgeon in the nearest town, twenty-three miles from the service hospital.

Guarantee Doctor's Fee

If a doctor is called, he may be an overnight trip distant, and his fee may be as much as fifty dollars for a call. This is far beyond the reach of the purse of practically every family in the district, so the service underwrites the bill, the patient paying as much as possible.

The hospital of the Frontier Nursing service has a physician in part-time attendance who also serves as health officer for Leslie county. His salary is paid jointly by the service and the state, and his office was created largely due to the interest aroused by the work of the frontier nurses.

The service itself charges five dollars for prenatal and post-partum care, including delivery. Besides this, a fee of one dollar a year entitles any individual or family to public health nursing service, and bedside care in case of illness, and families unable to pay this much are cared for without charge.

In their last fiscal year, the nurses of the frontier service attended 9,736 people in 1,851 families, making 47,827 visits altogether. This included 441 deliveries and "false calls."

The total costs of the service was $106,406.49 for the year, averaging $10.92 per patient actually served, but the entire 9,739 patients were able to pay only $3,367.43 of this total.

diedly trained and those whose only training was the discipline of love for girls and boys; there were grandmothers and spinsters of uncertain age, and young women of the type that make up the backbone of the movement; there were women from the town and old county families and women from remote corners of the county of whom the rest had never heard.

Organize In 1926

"On October 22, 1926 the Young Women's Christian Association of the Gettysburg District was organized, with the express purpose of operating not only within the town but in the surrounding county of Adams."

"The first service the association rendered the community was to provide a safe and pleasant place for the young girls of outlying places attending high school in Gettysburg to wait for bus and car and train to take them home. But it was soon apparent that unless an association car was procured little work could be done outside Gettysburg. A Committee on Travel was appointed, and we succeeded in getting a used Ford roadster for $155.00. By the middle of February, 1927, it was paid for, and in May it was being so constantly used that the secretary reported that it had not been possible to attach a new speedometer because the car was never in the garage in the day time long enough to get it on. The general secretary worked as hard as the Ford, or harder, for she worked while the Ford rested.

"In spite of our shortcomings and the lack of money and experience, there were over 400 members by the end of the first year, work had been started for industrial girls, and the board was feeling the way to establish work among the Negro girls of the town, although this was not an accomplished fact until much later. The Girl Reserve clubs were ten in number by the end of the second year, and it was planned to reach out into other communities as soon as the resources of the association made it possible. But it began to be evident even then that any further development must carry with it some measure of relief for our general secretary in the shape of part-time helpers, unless we wished to kill off our secretaries, one by one.

"One of the national board members visiting us very early in our history gave us what may prove to be at least a partial solution of the difficulty of too much work for the staff. She told us that monthly meetings of each committee, devoted to real study of the special problems of that committee, would lift a great burden off the shoulders of the general secretary. Yet to achieve this is itself a problem in a section where the leadership for so many organizations must be drawn from the same group of busy women."

"The work of the finance committee has been interesting always, because of the nice balance we have had to preserve between the trustee fund and the subscription fund raised by our annual drive. Some parts of our budget must come out of the subscription while others may be financed from the trustee fund. Working on the annual budget is as intriguing as a crossword puzzle, and a complicated process at best. In the beginning about the only amounts that we were absolutely certain of were the salaries. We had to guess at the rest, and the first year all our guesses were wrong, and we had to reconstruct the budget in the middle of the summer. We had robbed Peter to pay Paul until we scarcely knew which was which. The next year it was easier to estimate, the probabilities, but even now we are often beset with the temptation to do the impossible.

"The financial drive is really our major offensive, for on it the shaping of the work of the year depends. We have been fortunate in our friends. At the opening of the first drive in January, 1927, initial gifts amounting to about a thousand dollars, obtained through private solicitation, were announced. Some of those who at that time thrilled our hearts with checks for $100, or $75, or $50, have continued to give each year since. But more than half of the subscription fund must each year be made up of gifts ranging from ten cents to $5.00. We must expect members to carry the burden of our support, and besides we ourselves draw interest from the association only in proportion to our investment of time and money, ability and friendship.

"The Girl Reserve movement has brought a real gift to many girls of the county, especially to those in remote sections. This work has been at the cost of tremendous labor on account of the difficulty in arranging for capable and willing advisers for the groups. In spite of this, however, some fine projects have been carried through in various places. The chief problem of the Girl Reserves is to offer a program so vital, so challenging, that it compels interest, while at the same time it does not conflict with other organizations which may in certain districts cover the ground so far as the good of the girls is concerned. For this condition, a new beatitude has been invented: Blessed is the organizer who knows when to stop, for her work will endure.

Receive Gifts
"There have been interesting gifts to the association—a dining room table, grates and tongs for the two open fireplaces that have been a joy to club girls sitting around a cheerful blaze of chilly nights, a piano and bureau, a Christmas tree, a radio and a new Ford roadster that arrived just in time to prevent the first one from falling apart under the traveling secretary like the one he had. Then there was car room given free of charge by a friendly owner of a garage, when that meant the equivalent of perhaps seventy-five dollars a year. There have been bequests, too, since the initial gift of house and endowment, and one of the three rooms opened in the third story to provide pleasant lodging for strangers in Gettysburg, which draws visitors from all parts of the United States, is known as the bequest room."

"In this town so near the Maryland line women have been accustomed for long years to thinking of the needs of Negro people, and by and by there was for this work a committee. Then there was a club and the general secretary taught the Negro girls to sing again the spirituals, forgotten in this northern town."

"The work among the industrial girls has given rich returns. Delightful gifts have been discovered among them, and the girls themselves have taken much joy in the self-expression their club life has made possible. Just lately they made a distinct contribution to the work of the committee on education and legislation in their presentation of a clever little play. After seeing them in 'Mother Earth and Her Children,' it would be hard for any women to refuse to sign the petition to the disarmament conference at Geneva."

"A second play, 'On the Dotted Line,' was presented as part of the same program by members of two business and professional girls' clubs, which have done much since their organization to help in association work."

"One of the most significant phases of the association work has been the establishment of adult groups in the different communities in the county."

"The organization of such groups was sought at first as a backing for clubs of the younger folk, with the hope that they might in time come to take up certain projects beyond the reach of the girls. It has been a joyful surprise to see what gifts these older women have discovered among themselves, and with what eagerness they give themselves, here and there, to building up a friendly circle that takes in many people without losing the warmth and enthusiasm that makes it all worth while.

"In a certain corner of the county the Halloween party of the adult group was attended by a number of husbands, nephews and sons, mainly in the capacity of chauffeurs. Next day in an apple orchard in the neighborhood, one of these left-hand guests told a man who had not been privileged to attend that although he had been at many parties before, he had never had quite so good a time as at this one, where, if the truth must be told, most of the guests were old enough to be his mother. Doubtless, his surprise at finding out what capacity these older women had for playing with joyous abandon had much to do with his hearty enjoyment of their party. The fact remains that the women play with as little self-consciousness as children, plan their more serious meetings deftly, and carry them through with the precision that marks their work in their own homes.

"It is interesting to note little incidents which prove that the association has grown into the life of the town and county. There is the loan library sent out from the state library at Harrisburg. The Y. W. C. A. has made itself responsible for the care of the books, which go into all the nooks and corners of the county, giving people a foretaste of the privilege they will have if they support the projected county library. A story hour has been conducted from time to time. And there have been summer camps for girl reserves. Delegates have been sent from club or board to the fine summer conferences, and have brought back inspiration not only to the Y. W. C. A. but to the community.

"The members recall annual meetings with candlelighting services to bind them in a bright fellowship; enthusiastic semi-annual membership meetings; faithful all-day conferences of committee members, mother-daughter banquets in outlying towns; vespers now and then of a Sabbath evening; poorly attended board meetings—'weather and roads hopeless'; sparkling occasions when tea was served and somebody got flowers while yet alive to love them; all sorts of occasions binding us together with laughter and courage and friendship into an association that cannot be broken.

"We have been incorporated and we have our charter at last, we have worn out a third car, and we are face to face with our sixth annual drive at a time when giving is difficult because there is so little to give; yet somehow we believe that the Y. W. C. A. will go forward, a vital force in Gettysburg and Adams county."

Two popular photoplay stars are united for the first time in a talking picture at the Majestic Theatre Saturday, when the Paramount love drama, "His Woman," brings Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper onto the co-starring horizon.

The story, based on a novel, "The Sentimentalist," by Dale Collins, offers Cooper the type of role in which he excels, that of a lanky lish work among the Negro girls of the town, although this was not an accomplished fact until much later. The Girl Reserve clubs were ten in number by the end of the second year, and it was planned to reach out into other communities as soon as the resources of the association made it possible. But it began to be evident even then that any further development must carry with it some measure of relief for our general secretary in the shape of part-time helpers, unless we wished to kill off our secretaries one by one.

"One of the national board members visiting us very early in our history gave us what may prove to be at least a partial solution of the difficulty of too much work for the staff. She told us that monthly meetings of each committee, devoted to real study of the special problems of that committee, would lift a great burden off the shoulders of the general secretary. Yet to achieve this is itself a problem in a section where the leadership for so many organizations must be drawn from the same group of busy women."

"The work of the finance committee has been interesting always, because of the nice balance we have had to preserve between the trustee fund and our annual drive. Some parts of our budget must come out of the subscription while others may be financed from the trustee fund. Working on the annual budget is as intriguing as a crossword puzzle, and a complicated process at best. In the beginning about the only amounts that we were absolutely certain of were the salaries. We had to guess at the rest, and the first year all our guesses were wrong, and we had to reconstruct the budget in the middle of the summer. We had robbed Peter to pay Paul until we scarcely knew which was which. The next year it was easier

"The financial drive is really our major offensive, for on it the shaping of the work of the year depends. We have been fortunate in our friends. At the opening of the first drive in January, 1927, initial gifts amounting to about a thousand dollars, obtained through private solicitation, were announced. Some of those who at that time thrilled our hearts with checks for $100, or $75, or $50, have continued to give each year since. But more than half of the subscription fund must each year be made up of gifts ranging from ten cents to $5.00. We must expect members to carry the burden of our support, and besides we ourselves draw interest from the association only in proportion to our investment of time and money, ability and friendship.

"The Girl Reserve movement has brought a real gift to many girls of the county, especially to those in remote sections. This work has been at the cost of tremendous labor on account of the difficulty in arranging for capable and willing advisers for the groups. In spite of this, however, some fine projects have been carried through in various places. The chief problem of the Girl Reserves is to offer a program so vital, so challenging, that it compels interest, while at the same time it does not conflict with other organizations which may in certain districts cover the ground so far as the good of the girls is concerned. For this condition, a new beatitude has been invented: Blessed is the organizer who knows when to stop, for her work will endure.

Receive Gifts.
"There have been interesting gifts to the association—a dining room table, grates and tongs for the two open fireplaces that have been a joy to club girls sitting around a cheerful blaze of chilly nights, a piano and bureau, a Christmas tree, a radio and a new Ford roadster that arrived just in time to prevent the first one from falling apart under the traveling secretary like the one hoss shay. Then there was car room given free of charge by a friendly owner of a garage, when that meant the equivalent of perhaps seventy-five dollars a year. There have been bequests, too, since the initial gift of house and endowment, and one of the three rooms opened in the third story to provide pleasant lodging for strangers in Gettysburg, which draws visitors from all parts of the United States, is known as the bequest room."

"In this town so near the Maryland line women have been accustomed for long years to thinking of the needs of Negro people, and by and by there was for this work a committee. Then there was a club and the general secretary taught the Negro girls to sing again the spirituals, forgotten in this northern town.

"The work among the industrial girls has given rich returns. Delightful gifts have been discovered among them, and the girls themselves have taken much joy in the self-expression their club life has made possible. Just lately they made a distinct contribution to the work of the committee on education and legislation in their presentation of a clever little play. After seeing them in 'Mother Earth and Her Children,' it would be hard for any women to refuse to sign the petition to the disarmament conference at Geneva.

"A second play, 'On the Dotted Line,' was presented as part of the same program by members of two business and professional girls' clubs, which have done much since their organization to help in association work.

"One of the most significant phases of the association work has been the establishment of adult groups in the different communities in the county.

"The organization of such groups was sought at first as a backing for clubs of the younger folk, with the hope that they might in time come to take up certain projects beyond the reach of the girls. It has been a joyful surprise to see what gifts these older women have discovered among themselves, and with what eagerness they give themselves, here and there, to building up a friendly circle that takes in many

"In a certain corner of the county the Halloween party of the adult group was attended by a number of husbands, nephews and sons, mainly in the capacity of chauffeurs. Next day in an apple orchard in the neighborhood, one of these left-hand guests told a man who had not been privileged to attend that although he had been at many parties before, he had never had quite so good a time as at this one, where, if the truth must be told, most of the guests were old enough

AMUSEMENTS

Majestic

Two popular photoplay stars are united for the first time in a talking picture at the Majestic Theatre Saturday, when the Paramount love drama, "His Woman," brings Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper onto the co-starring horizon.

The story, based on a novel, "The Sentimentalist," by Dale Collins, offers Cooper the type of role in which he excels, that of a lanky young leader considerably at sea on how to handle women, but lacking not a second of action when a rough-and-tumble tussle will save any girl from attentions she considers unflattering at the hands of the other fellow.

Miss Colbert's work will be watched closely, her part as an abandoned girl of the waterfront being a direct antithesis of the smartly gowned portrayals in which she has scored her greatest successes.

In their six preliminary games before the Big Ten season opened, University of Minnesota basketballers averaged 35½ points to the opponents' 21, winning all the games.

Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised in the city of our God,
in the mountain of his holiness.
Beautiful for situation, the joy
of the whole earth, is mount Zion,
on the sides of the north, the city
of the great King.
God is known in her palaces for
a refuge.
For lo, the kings were assembled, they passed by together.
They saw it, and so they marveled; they were troubled, and hasted away.
Fear took hold upon them
there, and pain, as of a woman
in travail.
Thou breakest the ships of Tar-
shish with an east wind.
As we have heard, so have we
seen in the city of the Lord of hosts, in the city of our God: God
will establish it for ever. Selah.
We have thought of thy loving kindness, O God, in the midst
of thy temple.
According to thy name, O God,
so is thy praise unto the ends of the earth: thy right hand is full of righteousness.
Let mount Zion rejoice, let the daughters of Judah be glad, because of thy judgments.
Walk about Zion, and go round
about her: tell the towers thereof.
Mark ye well her bulwarks, consider her palaces: that ye may tell
it to the generation following.
For this God is our God for ever
and ever: he will be our guide
even unto death.

FEAR
The American psychologist, Watson, maintains that a child at birth is instinctively afraid of but two things. It fears loud noises and the sudden loss of support, that is, falling.
It is interesting to speculate why loud noises and falling should be instinctive fears.
Perhaps it is because since man's earliest experiences, noise and falling represented two ever-present
dangers and the reactions thereto
were of a vitally protective nature.
As civilization grew the varieties of fears to which man became subject increased.
H. G. Wells aptly observes, "In civilized life the tendency is constant to attain fears to states of mind rather than to possible injury to the body."
"People come to accept discomfort, privation and even death in preference to social disgrace, unfavorable publicity, scandal, loss of prestige, or being out of fashion."
Fear may be said to be the parent of caution and of reflection. In reverse, improper reflection may foster fear.

Charles E. Smith, born in York county, graduated from Bellevue
Medical college, March 9, 1873; residence, Center Mills.

R. S. Seiss, born in Frederick proposed an interesting hypothesis as to the origin of fear and fear
behavior.

He maintained that in the case of a man who runs away because he is afraid, this statement expressing the relationship between cause and effect is in improper order.

He contended, contrary to common belief, that the man does not run away because he fears, but rather that he fears because he runs away.

It should therefore be possible,
according to this theory, to eliminate fear by training men to behave in certain patterns. Their physical behavior would cause
them to be fearless.

Undoubtedly a good deal of military training is directed to this end.

Recent studies, however, particularly those of Cannon, tend to cast doubt upon the validity of James' hypothesis.

STORIES

AUSTRALIA ONCE MORE
By Mary Graham Bonner

They stopped off to see the Tasmanian Striped Bandicoot before going back to Australia. He was about 15 inches in length and his tail was short and very tiny.

In fact it looked as though it was hardly a tail at all before it came to the end.

The Bandicoot had soft, smooth fur and a long, thin snout. His ears stood straight up and were not very large. His waistcoat was white and his coat of brown, and as he stood and spoke to them he held his short front feet up, much in the manner of a kangaroo.

John and Peggy visited members of the Opossum family and they saw Turtles and Lizards and Frogs.

They saw Sea Lions and they saw Snakes, and they traveled all over to see these creatures.

They saw Crocodiles and Tor-toises until they really felt they knew Australia's animals quite well.
And they saw Sperm Whales and heard of the great devotion of a Sperm Whale mother to all her friends and particularly to her young.

When they got back to Australia they paid a visit to Rabbit Bandi-coot which reminded them of a rabbit much more than it did of the Bandicoot they had just seen.

Oh, how many animals they saw!
They visited the Dingo Dogs—wild and wolf-like and known for being beloved by natives but hated by those who had sheep farms. The Dingo Dogs were fond of sheep killing.

Somehow they had never thought of a huge creature such as a Sperm Whale as being so affectionate and so loyal and so brave!

grave and wise,
And after much conferring this they said:
"Master, your greatest need is exercise."
"How shall I get it?" asked the pale-faced king.
"There is but one way only," they replied.
"Go to the woods and learn an axe to swing,
Get down and walk and let your groomsman ride."

Farmer Killed
By Express Train

Egg Harbor, N. J., Jan. 15.—Meyer
Rosenberg, 48, a farmer of Delaware township, near here, was killed
shortly before noon Thursday when
he drove his truck in front of a speeding Reading company express
train at the Frankford avenue grade
crossing, within sight of his home.

Meyer was driving parallel to the railroad tracks and apparently swung his machine across the right of way without looking behind.

The locomotive, speeding at seventy-five miles an hour, demolished
the machine and went nearly a half mile before it could be brought to a halt.

The impact damaged the locomotive so seriously that the train was held up for more than an hour while repairs were made. The cow-catcher was driven downward into
the roadbed, and the air-brake system was badly damaged. The train had left Atlantic City at 11:30 a. m.
and was due in Egg Harbor at 11:49.

South Carolina has placed five new opponents on its football schedule for 1932.

China May Ask U. S. To Call Meet

Nanking, Jan. 15 (AP).—Foreign Minister Chen said China might ask the United States to call a conference of the nine-power treaty signatories to work out a permanent solution of the Manchurian problem.

In a note to Washington Doctor
Chen said China was ready to cooperate in upholding the pact and hoped America would take further action.

The foreign minister also issued a denial of reports from Shanghai he had approached the Japanese consul general there to ascertain under what conditions Japan would begin direct negotiations in the Manchurian dispute.

"So long as the Japanese army is in Chinese territory the national government will enter into no negotiations with Japan," he said.

Gives Up Her "Artificial Lung" To Aid Boy in Fight for Life

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 15 (AP).—A drama of life and death, in which the stepdaughter of the publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal gave up an oxygen-administering device that the son of a Los Angeles newspaper city editor might have a chance for recovery, became known Wednesday with the death of 12-year-old Patten Levings.

Meantime, an airplane was winging its way through rough weather from Columbus, Ohio, where it had been forced to spend the night, bringing an oxygen tank "breathing chamber" from New York, should it still be needed.

Miss Alice Hilliard, ill with pneumonia at the desert sanatorium, was obtaining relief from the only apparatus available in Tucson from administration of oxygen when young Levings, son of W. H. Levings, city editor of the Los Angeles Herald and Express, in St. Mary's hospital here, suffered a relapse after an operation for mastoid. Miss Hilliard decided to battle against pneumonia without artificial aid, and the oxygen machine was rushed to St. Mary's in an effort to save another life.

The boy failed to react to the oxygen treatment, as had Miss Hilliard. He died Wednesday.

5-pound fowl; 1 teaspoon salt; 1/4 teaspoon paprika; 1/2 cup flour; 4 tablespoons fat; 3 tablespoons butter; 1 cup water.

Carefully wash and clean the fowl and cut into serving pieces.

Wash well in cold water. Let drip dry.

Sprinkle with salt, paprika and flour. Heat fat in frying pan.

Add chicken and brown it quickly. Place in baking pan.

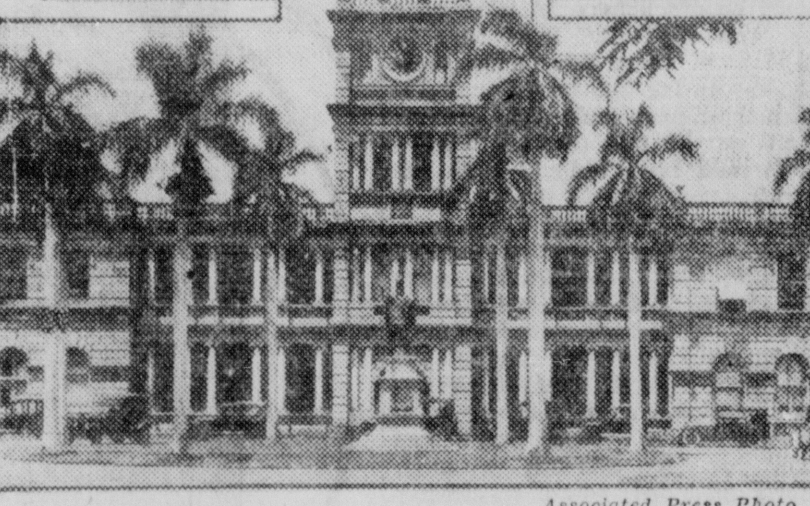

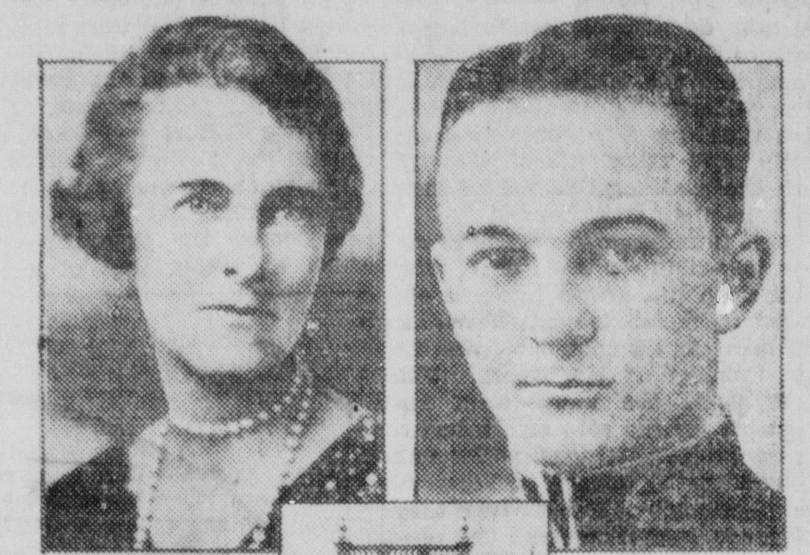

Add butter and water to frying pan and boil 1 minute. Pour over chicken. Cover and bake 2 hours in moderately slow oven.

Long slow cooking improves the flavor of this chicken.

The giblets can be cleaned, washed and cooked with the chicken in roasting pan. When gravy is to be made, chicken is removed

CIVIL COURT GETS 'HONOR' CASE

Plans were speeded to bring to trial Lieut. Thomas Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue, and two seamen charged with the slaying of an Hawaiian native, one of five men accused of attacking Mrs. Massie. The four, in custody of naval officials, were ordered turned over to civil authorities for trial. Above are Massie, Mrs. Fortescue and the court house in Honolulu where the trial probably will be held.

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation

When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name: Charles H. Fletcher CASTORIA CHILDREN CRY FOR IT

New York — Literally speaking, many deliberately made it a blue stituted for the cheery red in Yuletide decorative schemes, in homes as well as in shop displays.In some of the elaborate store windows, not a trace of Kris Krin-gle's familiar red hues has been seen. The wreaths and even the trees were blue or frosted white.None of them was green in such unorthodox ornamentation.

Accompanying metallic doodads left the gold standard, with their silver finish reflecting the current fad for chromium.The effect in many instances has been lovely and certainly novel, but just the same not Christmas-like.For the most part, commercial displays of this nature were addressed to adults. Shop windows with an appeal to the youngsters were bedecked in the conventional manner.More than one adult was heard to comment on the appropriateness of the scheme and, for that reason, to pronounce it distressing.

Briefs And Grievs

Turning away from the St. Nicholas blues it is a relief to look at the couturiers' windows featuring fashions for the ladies at the Southern resorts. They are riots of green, yellow and red, with no suggestion of sombre times. We must look to the women for backbone in this crisis, judging from the newest bathing suits.Ralph Butt of Far Rockaway high school was the butt of one of life's little jokes the other day. Butt wanted to be captain of the football team next year, but as a gentlemanly gesture he voted for his rival, who intimated to vote for himself.
He lost the captaincy by but one vote.

Once In A Lifetime

The public relations counsel for a big movie mogul telephoned to ask me to come to a ritzy hotel, where his boss would deliver utterances of "genuine news value."From the press agent prelude I gathered that it all had to do with an issue of real importance confronting the industry. The boss was ready with a message that would put an issue between him and some of the other heavyweights of the producing game.Among the assembled news men were movie trade paper experts.
They anticipated a juicy story, from their angle. The p.a. asked us all to wait, as his boss was delayed by an important conference at his office.After awhile an apologetic gentleman from the office burst into the room."Boys," he said, "I'm sorry to have to tell you for Mr. — that he can't make it."Then the apologist informed us that somebody had waived off with the boss' typewritten message, and under those circumstances the champion of a great cause simply couldn't face the press.Wright field at Dayton, Ohio, and Patterson field adjoining comprise the largest airfield in the world, covering more than 5,000 acres.Gandhi Costume Becomes "Popular"Colombo, Ceylon (AP)—Gandhi's jaincloth idea helped two European tourists out of difficulties here.Leaving their boat for a game of golf they were caught in a sudden storm and soaked to the skin. They took their clothes to the club to dry, and then became worried for fear the ship would sail.Wrapping big bath towels about them they burst into the astonished agent's office to learn the sailing time."Why not?" one asked when the agent expressed some surprise at the costumes. "Gandhi walked into Buckingham palace in less."Oil of some kind was used in the construction of the pyramids.

SORE THROAT

There's a world of winter comfort in Bayer Aspirin tablets. If you take them only to break-up colds, you know only half the story. Three tablets crushed in a little water will relieve the sorest throat with one good gargle. That's what the specialists use in cases of sore throat. That's what you ought to use at home—every time you want throat comfort and protection from infection. Remember, every case of tonsillitis began with just a sore throat! Don't neglect any sore throat. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin at the first tickling felt. Take a couple of tablets for that headache that comes with a cold—for neuralgia, neuritis, or similar pain. If it's genuine Bayer, it can't hurt the heart.

Gives Up Her "Artificial Lung" To Aid Boy in Fight for Life

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 15 (AP).—A drama of life and death, in which the stepdaughter of the publisher of the Louisville Courier-Journal gave up an oxygen-administering device that the son of a Los Angeles newspaper city editor might have a chance for recovery, became known Wednesday with the death of 12-year-old Fatten Levings.

Meantime, an airplane was winging its way through rough weather from Columbus, Ohio, where it had been forced to spend the night, bringing an oxygen tank "breathing chamber" from New York, should it still be needed.

Miss Alice Hillard, ill with pneumonia at the desert sanatorium, was obtaining relief from the only apparatus available in Tucson from administration of oxygen when young Levings, son of W. H. Levings, city editor of the Los Angeles Herald and Express, in St. Mary's hospital here, suffered a relapse after an operation for mastoid. Miss Hillard decided to battle against pneumonia without artificial aid, and the oxygen machine was rushed to St. Mary's in an effort to save another life.

The boy failed to react to the oxygen treatment, as had Miss Hillard. He died Wednesday.

CIVIL COURT GETS 'HONOR' CASE

Plans were speeded to bring to trial Lieut. Thomas Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Cranville Fortescue, and two seamen charged with the slaying of an Hawaiian native, one of five men accused of attacking Mrs. Massie. The four, in custody of naval officials, were ordered turned over to civil authorities for trial. Above are Massie, Mrs. Fortescue and the court house in Honolulu where the trial probably will be held.

RESTFUL SLEEP for FRETFUL, FEVERISH CHILD

—With Castoria's regulation
When your child tosses and cries out in his sleep, it means he is not comfortable. Very often the trouble is that poisonous waste matter is not being carried off as it should be. Bowels need help—mild, gentle help—but effective. Just the kind Castoria gives. Castoria is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for children's ailments. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics. Don't let your child's rest—and your own—be interrupted. A prompt dose of Castoria will urge stubborn little bowels to act. Then relaxed comfort and restful sleep! Genuine Castoria always has the name:

CASTORIA
CHILDREN CRY FOR IT

Always
EVERY family calling upon us is given our personal attention. This is a matter of importance, assuring all of the finest service.

SAVINGS BANK

in 1932

Although saving is always in fashion, 1932 bids fair to be a particularly thrifty year. You will find it a happy year, too, if you make regular week-to-week savings deposits. Saving will insure future prosperity for you.

There is no substitute for a Savings Account in this bank.

BALLET DEPICTS COTTON MILL. Manchester, England (AP).—As part of an outdoor cotton pageant here next June, 1,000 dancers are being trained for a ballet which will depict a mill town waking up, going to work, starting machinery, spinning cotton and weaving the yarn. There will be room for 40,000 spectators.

A student's aid department of an Oakland, California, school, re-soles 100 pairs of shoes a week, making the soles from old automobile tires. The official name for China is Chung-Hua Min Kuo.

KING GEORGE'S PUPPY

ADOPTED BY PRINCESS

London (AP).—King George is having a hard time getting a dog to replace "Snip", his dead pet.

The Duke of Gloucester bought Dougal, a black Aberdeen, for his father, but at the palace Dougal turned out to be a bit young. He was always breaking rules which he couldn't understand.

However, Princess Elizabeth, 5-year-old mistress of the royal family, formed an attachment for the pup, so now Dougal is happy at 145 Piccadilly, Elizabeth's home.

When the air is moist enough, a temperature of 68 degrees is considered ideal for the human body.
